Kiwanians Hold Special Program

Celebration of the 35th anniversary of the birth of Kiwanis featured the program of the local club at the Pine Tavern here this noon, with Rev. Robert E. Nicholas introducing members of the local organization to explain Kiwanis objectives and to give their ideas as to how these might be carried out. "Self expression," Nicholas said, is the key to achievement of service goals.

Ben Hamilton, immediate past president, read the birthday message from the president of Kiwanis International after Clyde M. McKay, charter member, had cut the white-frosted anniversary cake under the approving gaze of Don Conner, club president for 1950.

The outline contained in the message was elaborated by C. L. Allen, who urged the importance of parental example in the home; by the program chairman, who suggested that, "if you are a church member, do something about it"; by Don Pritchett, who stressed membership in parent-teacher organizations and active interest in school elections as means of increasing effectiveness of the schools; by G. R. Moty, who emphasized the importance of a wholesome recreation program as a service to youth; by C. L. McAllister, who warned that alertness of the general citizenry is needed to avert subversive infiltration of government, and by Gordon Randall, pointing the need for a consistent home safety campaign.

Jack Wetle introduced Howard Moffat, who counseled "an audit of our own characters" as a prerequisite for rooting out mental laziness, and Craig Coyner, who upheld the values of competitive private enterprise.

At the opening of the meeting President Conner took exception to the "Behind the Mike" account in The Oregonian of the non-appearance of Austin Flegel at last Monday's luncheon here. In the questioned paragraph, it was stated: "When Austin Flegel was in Bend he was invited to address the Kiwanis club. The club regularly meets at Pine Tavern. There has been a picket outside the joint for a year, and Flegel refused to walk across the line..." "We didn't invite him; we said we'd take him," Conner observed, "and the Pine Tavern isn't a joint."

Bend Couple Describe Ordeal During Blizzard

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wood, of 111 Hawthorne, whose car was trapped for 17 hours behind a snowplow on the South Santiam highway west of Santiam junction, reported today that they suffered no ill effects from the ordeal. Although they wouldn't care to go through the experience again, they said they were glad to be able to be of assistance to the snowplow driver, Giles Orant, who suffered from exposure to the elements, and might have perished alone in a blizzard-swept cut 14 miles west of Santiam junction.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood started back to Bend from Corvallis Friday morning. They were towed to Santiam junction Saturday at 12 noon, and arrived in Bend Saturday night. About 17 miles west of the junction, they had fallen in behind a snowplow and followed the equipment until it bogged down in heavy snow and was unable to proceed. The Woods' car was stopped about 100 yards behind the plow. The snow plow driver invited the couple to wait with him in the truck, where he kept the motor running to warm the cab.

No Help Forthcoming

The driver's shift ended at 4 p.m., and he said that when he didn't report in, help would probably be sent from the junction. At midnight no help had come, and the truck's gasoline supply was exhausted. A five-gallon can of fuel that the Woods had carried for emergencies and had taken with them to the plow was emptied into the tank, and it was exhausted at 2 a.m. The three made their way back to the parked car, struggling against the blizzard and stopping to rest about 10 times. The driver, nearly exhausted, had difficulty in getting his breath, and the Bend couple helped him to their car. They succeeded in starting the car, and were using the dwindling fuel supply to run the heater when another snow plow approached from the east at about 2:30. A snow blower arrived a short time later, and for two hours, the three pieces of highway equipment were stuck while the men worked to dig them loose. A service car arrived later and towed the Woods' car and one of the plows to the junction, where the highway crew served hot coffee and food. The Bend couple later followed an oil truck from the junction to Sisters.

FUNDS SET ASIDE

Funds aggregating $312,000 have been set aside by the U. S. public health service as the government's aid in the construction of the $900,000 Bend memorial hospital. Early in January it was announced that funds in sufficient amount to make possible the final application for federal aid and the signing of contracts had been obtained. Funds now available will make it possible to include most of the desired alternates in the hospital contracts.

However, it was stressed more funds will be required to incorporate various items excluded from the contracts and for possible contingencies and assistance in furnishing the big memorial hospital.

The final installment of funds to make possible construction of the hospital was obtained by additional borrowing, authorized by the Sisters of St. Joseph. It was also announced that subscriptions made beyond construction necessities will be held in reserve against loan obligations. Robert W. Sawyer, president of the Central Oregon Hospitals foundation, reported a donation of $250 has just been received from Louis W. Hill Jr., St. Paul, Minn. Hill is a grandson of James J. Hill, who built the Oregon Trunk railroad to Bend.

were brought to a halt early Sunday.

The passengers generally were suffering no discomfort. There was plenty of food, and breakfast was served without charge this morning. The main discomfort was to passengers without sleeping accommodations. They napped in chairs and tourist seats.

Despite the U.S. weather bureau's long-range forecast of a "warm storm" approaching the northwest, there was virtually no break in the chain of bitter snow-bearing gales throughout the weekend and Monday. Snow piled a foot deep on Portland's suburban hills, 44 inches at Darlington, Wash., and between 9 and 11 inches deep, with drifts up to six feet, in the Puget sound area.

At least 19 persons have died in British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, northern California and Utah as a result of blizzards.

Motorists Stranded A sudden blizzard whipped down the Columbia river gorge last night, stranding 100 motorists, blocking two main highways and adding to the havoc caused by last Friday's record blow.

The Great Northern railroad's Empire Builder picked up the stranded near Stevenson, Wash., and took them to Bingen, Wash., where they boosted that tiny town's population 10 per cent.

The Evergreen highway and U.S. 30 on the Oregon shore were blocked by the sudden gorse storm. Route 50 remained open to Bend, and highway 20 from there to Boise, Ida.

The warm storm, riding in on southeasterly winds, was expected to arrive off shore at 30 miles an hour, bringing rain and higher temperatures.

Roads Closed

Throughout the region, police reported the gradual clearing of roads in the wake of Friday's blizzard that claimed at least 12 lives in the northwest, buttressed by rail, highway and air traffic, snarled power and telephone lines and isolated cities and broad rural areas.

Weed, Calif., police said three stranded buses and some of several hundred motorists broke out of two-day isolation in Weed after the snowplow routes 97 and 99 were cleared for "light traffic."

Portland, Seattle and Tacoma airports reported flights back on normal schedules. But the Southern Pacific railroad said northbound and southbound Shasta Daylight streamliners between San Francisco and Portland would be cancelled today because of needed roadbed repairs.

A postal and southern Oregon warm-up was expected to add weary highway crews which have been busy since Friday, attempting to take knots out of the region's road net.

Small streams and rivers on the Cascade mountains' west slope were expected to rise and possibly flood.

In British Columbia, despite a minor snow storm, the Trans-Canadian highway was cleared and 500 engineers rescued from snowbound barracks, five miles from Vancouver.

Sumas, Wash., was re-linked with the outside world when a convoy of food, milk and baker trucks followed snowplows into the community. An amateur radio station had been the only tie with civilization after the blizzard toppled power poles.

MOST OF NATION COLD

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP)—A vast cold wave swept most of the nation today, riding on high winds that gave the Pacific northwest its stormiest week end in 50 years.

The cold drove temperatures down to the zero mark in the midwest, increasing the suffering among 5,000 refugees from floods raging along the Ohio and Wabash rivers.

The U. S. and Canada counted 56 dead as result of the bad weather and floods. Ten of the dead were in Canada, which was struck twice by the storm, once when it roared off the Pacific into British Columbia and again when it passed northeastward over

BAD MAN WANTED

Calling all liars, thieves, adulterers and such as curse God or commit any other sin. You are dead, for to God for you to have sinned and the wages of sin is death—Bible death—eternal separation from God and in eternal anguish.—See BIBLE, Luke 16:24. But Mr. So-Good does not answer the call for he says his education, culture, books, and his good life cancels out his sins and so God will pass him. But in God's holy eyes Mr. So-Good's human best is but a filthy rag. BIBLE, Isaiah 64:6. BELIEVE AND LIVE. Now back to you who know you have sinned. It cost Christ His life to take your sins and die for you. God's part was to give Christ, Christ's part was to die for you. Your part is to believe that Christ cleared your page by His death for your sins. Now step a head, looking to Christ for new ways, days and appetites. God men and angels are to know Christ has made you His new creation. So which for you? Judgment Day and anguish or Resurrection Day and Glory? Which?

er the Great Lakes. Seven deaths occurred in light plane crashes. The Pacific northwest counted 15 due to freezing, bad roads and high winds.

Meanwhile, the U. S. weather bureau at Chicago warned that the continent might be in for a series of such severe storms. Forecasters said a vast body of extremely cold air has hung over the Yukon territory and adjacent Alaska since Dec. 21 with the Yukon hovering at 40 to 50 below zero.

"Quickie" Cold Waves

"As storms develop," a forecaster said, "chunks of this cold air are torn off and hurled southward, giving the U. S. a series of quickie cold waves and sharp blizzard conditions."

He said there was a possibility that the entire cold mass might sweep south suddenly. "In that case," he said, "we'd be in for an extreme prolonged cold wave that could break all records."

Meanwhile, however, the Pacific northwest was promised some relief from the snow that stranded hundreds of travelers and isolated many cities in Washington and Oregon.

A "warm storm" was sweeping off the southern Pacific, bringing warm rains and southerly breezes that was expected to melt much of the snow blocking roads in the area.

A sudden blizzard whipped down the Columbia river gorge last night, trapping 100 motorists who were picked up by the Great Northern railroad's Empire Builder as they stood along the right-of-way.

Centered Over Idaho The storm was centered over Idaho today and forecasters said it would bring more snow to the northern plains and Great Lakes area by tomorrow night.

Highway, train and airplane traffic gradually was returning to normal after the big storm, the worst in half a century, that struck the west coast Friday.

Police permitted "light traffic" to begin moving over route 97

Robber Murders Girl, Gets Cash

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 16 (AP)—A robber apparently slashed Mary Kabaseka's throat and wrist, then let her bleed to death in an alley while he fled with the few dollars in her purse, authorities said today.

The tiny and frail 26-year-old music student was found dead early Sunday at the spot where the bandit killed her as she returned home from a ballet performance. She was killed a little more than a block from her home.

Lt. Lester McAuliffe of the homicide squad said he did not think she was attacked by a sex fiend. She was wearing ski trousers and her clothing was not disarranged.

The girl, who stood barely five feet tall and weighed only 90 pounds, was a "lonely" person who had been adopted by her music teacher, pianist Orlando Teschion, nine years ago.

Teschion said Miss Kabaseka had no boy friends and lived a quiet life.

Friday the 13th Really Bad Luck Day for Bus Line

Friday, Jan. 13, was truly a bad luck day for Pacific Trailways but, officials reported today, things could have been worse.

It was on Friday 13 that a Bend-bound Trailways bus crashed into a snowplow east of Government camp, injuring 17 and wrecking the big bus. It was reported by Trailways officials today that a hospital check over the week end revealed no broken bones and no serious injuries. The last of the bus occupants was to be released from the hospital today.

Also on Friday 13, a Trailways bus, on the Bend-Eugene run, stopped at the Mountain house, near Upper Soda springs, on the South Santiam route. While bus occupants and drivers were in the roadside restaurant, two trees fell across the bus, resulting in some damage.

Otherwise, Trailways officials said today, operations Friday were normal.
