Snead Replaces Hogan as Top Golfer of U. S.

By Oscar Fraley
(United Press Sports Writer)

New York (UP)—Slammin' Sammy Snead, the hot-shot hill-billy from the Virginia mountains, was the golfer of the year in 1949—thanks to the fates which struck low Ben Hogan just as the mighty mite of the fairways apparently had reached his peak.

The bantam Benjay was riding high—holder of both the National open and P.G.A. championships—when he was critically injured in an automobile accident last February while en route to this Fort Worth, Tex., home after the Phoenix open.

There still is a question, almost a year later, whether the little mechanical man ever will play again. Certainly he never will be able, at the age of 38, to recapture his deadly tournament touch after being gone from the grind so long.

But Snead, the balding, 35-year-old stylist, took up much of the slack in the mad scramble for Hogan's throne. And he had all he could do to beat out the red-hot Cary Middlecoff, who crashed through to win the National open.

Snead Wins $30,893.83

Snead wound up on top, however, as the year's leading money winner ($30,893.83) and golfer of the year. He took the laurels by capturing the P.G.A. match play championship for the second time by downing Johnny Palmer of Badin, N.C., in the finals, 3 and 2, and added such much sought titles as the Masters, the Western open, the Greensboro open, the Washington invitation and finishing second to Middlecoff in the National open.

Middlecoff, who swapped a dentist's drills for divots, finally arrived with a smash. He won the National open, the Motor City open, Greenbrier invitation, Jacksonville open, Miami four-ball and the Rio Grande Valley open. He had one red hot streak in which over eight straight tournaments he never was worse than third—winning four and getting two seconds and two thirds. He was not eligible for the P.G.A. tournament or might have wound up with golfer of the year honors.

Locke Wins British Open

The much-sought British open went to Bobby Locke, the South African shotmaker who subsequently received a suspension in the United States. After winning the British crown, Locke canceled a commitment in the United States "so that the British could see their champion for a while."

The U. S. P. G. A. immediately barred him from tournament play, despite the fact that many American pros constantly neglect tournament assignments. The British took no retaliatory action when, after the pound was devaluated suddenly as the U. S. Ryder cup team was in England, the Americans faulted on all their British commitments and dashed for home, as one American pro put it, "like rates leaving a sinking ship."

In international play, the U. S. pros defeated the British 7 to 5 at Ganton, Eng., to retain the Ryder cup, and among the amateurs the U. S. easily defended the Walker cup, 10 to 2, at Mamaroneck, N.Y.

Cee Wins Amateur

Charley Coe, the Oklahoma thin man, won the U. S. amateur title and Sam McCready, a burly Irishman, captured the British amateur crown.

Mrs. Mark Porter of Philadelphia, the former Dorothy Germaine, won the women's national amateur crown by defeating Dot Kielty of Los Angeles in the final. Fifteen-year-old Marlene Bauer of Los Angeles, winner of the U. S. Golf association's first junior championships, reached the semi-finals.

Helen Siegel of Philadelphia won the women's western amateur and Louise Suggs of Atlanta, a professional, won both the Women's Western open and Women's U. S. open, scoring a record 291 in the latter.

IN HIS ACT—Traded by the New York Giants to the Boston Braves, Outfielder Willard Marshall gets into the spirit of the change at his Palisade, N.J., home.

BIG TANK "MISLAID"

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 19 (AP)—Red-faced national guard officers reported today that a 50,000-gallon gasoline storage tank must have been "mislaid."

The tank arrived in Cheyenne two years ago. Its disappearance was not noted until several weeks ago when the guard wanted to put it into use.

Woman Sets Record Straight

Fort Worth, Tex. (UP)—A 30-year-old mother, whose eight-month-old baby was taken away from her in district court here, insisted on keeping the record straight.

Her record, read in court, indicated she drank excessively, had practiced immoral acts while her husband was in the navy, and had been arrested as a prostitute at Los Angeles.

"Is that record correct?" asked Judge Bob Young.

"Certainly not," was the indignant reply. "My husband was in the army, not the navy. And I was arrested at Long Beach, not Los Angeles."

Stock Trading At Low Level

New York, Jan. 19 (AP)—Trading in stocks lightened today to the smallest total of the year.

Prices developed a firm tone late in the day and the leading averages showed small net gains after early declines.

Strength in a few key issues steadied the market after its recession in the first part of the session. Buying developed and late prices showed gains ranging to more than a point in a long list of issues. These were well sustained at closing time in contrast with sellons in the past two sessions in the late deals.

Strong spots included Santa Fe in the rails, Peoples Gas in the utilities, American Can and J. I. Case in the industrials. The latter rose sharply on favorable earnings predictions. Steel and auto issues firmed late in the day. Several of the oils moved ahead. Douglas moved ahead in the aircrafts on an extra dividend.

New highs included Abbott Laboratories, American Can, American Power & Light, Santa Fe, General Baking, Guantanamo Sugar, Family Finance, New York Gas & Electric, and Standard Gas $4 preferred.

Activity developed in the steels, notably U.S. Steel, and the Duquesne Light company decided to postpone its plan to cut off all but essential users of electricity because of a lack of coal. A shutdown to industrial users would have brought lower steel production.

Fair-sized volume came into International Telephone when ruled firm. Textiles had several strong spots. Western Union moved higher in the communications.

Must Be Getting Used to It Now!

When Walter Kittredge, central Oregon stockman, disappears overnight in snow-blanketed midstate rangelands, it is no longer news.

Last week Kittredge was reported lost in a storm in the Devils garden lava wilderness north of Fort Rock. Searchers converged on the area and Kittredge was found in the lavas, after spending two nights out—one night in a car and another in the lava beds.

Kittredge visited the home ranch at Silver Lake to recuperate following his chilling experience, then headed back, by car, for Brothers, where he is spending the winter. He failed to reach Brothers that night, and it developed that he was forced to spend another night out in the blizzard-swept highlands when his pickup truck stalled in drifts. The next day he continued on to Brothers.

In Bend yesterday evening Kittredge, grinning broadly, admitted that he was forced to spend another night out, following a rescue, then murmured something that sounded like: "Ah shucks, that ain't nothing." Since his second experience in being stranded in a drift, he has spent another night in the field.

This week, Kittredge drove into Crook county, got into more deep snow and drifts and was stranded once more overnight.

The metal mercury, known for some 15 centuries, has been called quicksilver, liquid silver and live silver at various times and places.

Storm Breaks

chilling and freezing as it touched the earth.

Bend yesterday experiencsed one of its lowest maximum temperatures in many years, 9 above zero. While Bend people were shivering in the boreal zone yesterday, warm weather was reported to the south, with rain falling at Lapine.

Silver Thaw Reported

While water from melting snow formed in Bend streets today, much of northern Oregon was experiencing a silver thaw. Highways were slippery. Snow covered mountain routes. The silver thaw reached from Corvallis north in western Oregon. Snow plows were operating over all mountain passes, but slushy conditions were reported from the Santiam pass.

The sudden break in the cold spell resulted in the speeding up of the work of clearing Bend streets and opening snow-choked rural roads. Schools in most parts of the county will reopen tomorrow, with road conditions expected to be near normal.

In Bend, sawmill operations will remain closed the rest of the week.

Downtown Bend swiftly came back to life today, as spring-like weather shot the mercury toward the 50 degree mark early in the afternoon.

RELIEF IN SIGHT

Portland, Jan. 19 (AP)—Freezing rain today spread an icy coat, several inches thick, over western Oregon and southwestern Washington in the most crippling storm since 1943, but the weather bureau predicted some relief in the next 24 hours.

Transportation was halted over many highways and was severely hampered throughout the area.

Ice pellets fell to depths of four and five inches over Portland last night and turned into a coat of ice this morning. The freezing rain moved up the Willamette valley from Eugene late yesterday.

All schools in the Portland area were closed and many schools, especially in the rural districts, were shut down throughout the state. Buses were running on erratic schedules in Portland.

Communications Cut

Communications lines were reported down in some sections and power disruptions were reported in several Willamette valley communities. The Bonneville power administration at Portland said that the power load was at capacity but that no line breaks had been reported.

The weather bureau said the last time ice covered western Oregon was in 1943 when a "silver thaw" hit the Willamette valley.

The weather bureau said temperatures in Portland would rise above freezing for the first time in a week. At Bend the temperature rose from three degrees late yesterday to 47 this morning. A warm Chinook wind was blowing and the thermometer was expected to continue to rise.

A slide blocked Union Pacific railroad tracks at Oneonta gorge and trains were routed across the Columbia river at Wishram to the Spokane, Portland & Seattle tracks on the Washington side. Trains were one to two hours late arriving in Portland.

No Breaks

The Bonneville power administration at Portland said that the power load was at capacity but that no line breaks had been reported.

Leaking gas from a feeder line broken by a landslide asphyxiated a Seattle couple late Wednesday night. The victims, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Cotton, were found dead in bed Thursday morning by deputy sheriffs and a Seattle gas company repairman.

The frozen body of Thomas Wozny, 70, a semi-invalid, was found on his back porch steps Wednesday night in Tacoma and officers said he apparently had fallen down. Another man, George Matson, 46, was found frozen in Aberdeen Wednesday noon.

A freight train derailment Wednesday night between Oakland, Calif., and Drain, Ore., delayed Southern Pacific trains seven or more hours in southwestern Oregon.

A sticky night-long snowfall turned to rain and froze, glazing highways and leaving a brittle crust on the white mantle that cloaked the entire region.
