

U. N. Refugee Assistance Project to Wind Up Soon

Frankfurt, Germany (AP)—A mammoth organization which for years has been the hope of hundreds of thousands of displaced persons and refugees will break up its camps during the middle of 1950.

The International Refugee Organization, which has carried out a tremendous task for almost three years, ceases its activity next June.

Up to the closing date, the IRO either will have resettled or repatriated 970,000 persons, IRO officials said.

After that date the only exception will be made for persons who are "actually in process of resettlement."

Officials have estimated that about 290,000 persons still will be dependent on IRO aid after June, 1950.

The IRO council in Geneva decided last October to continue certain functions of the organization in a supplementary period of six to nine months past the closure date.

The IRO hopes that it will be able to reestablish 100,000 more persons during the prolonged period of nine months after next June.

That decision, however, has no effect on the closing down date announced earlier, Philip E. Ryan, IRO chief of the U.S. zone, said.

"We are under instructions to terminate all care and maintenance of displaced persons on or before June 30 except for those persons as may then be in the process of resettlement," Ryan said.

Zone headquarters meanwhile was working out plans to continue assistance in the resettlement of DPs for the nine months after June.

Refugees who have left their home countries since Oct. 15, 1949, are no longer qualified for IRO assistance in care and maintenance or in resettlement or repatriation. They may, however, request legal and political protection.

No persons will be accepted in camps after next Dec. 31.

IRO officials are facing another serious problem. Most of the applicants had chosen the United States for emigration but comparatively few are eligible under the present displaced person act.

An amendment that would have admitted over 100,000 more DPs to the United States was deferred by the U.S. senate at its last session.

Thus the IRO will be forced to send the number of persons not admitted for immigration into the United States to Canada, Australia or Venezuela.

Rosie the Riveter No Longer Works

Long Beach, Calif. (AP)—Rosie the Riveter and all but four of her 353 fellow workwomen in the Terminal island naval shipyard have quit since the war's end.

Personnel files that included women welders, chippers, burners, electricians, boiler-makers, pipefitters and riveters now show only a storekeeper, a machine operator, a photo-lithographer and a chauffeur.

At the peak of war-time employment in the shipyard, there were nearly 3,000 women working there. But most of them had more "ladylike" jobs as clerical and departmental employees.

TOO MANY DUMB ONES

Los Angeles, Jan. 24 (AP)—Freshman college students are growing "increasingly illiterate," President Ernest Colwell of the University of Chicago said today.

"More students are going to school every year to learn less," Dr. Colwell, here to attend a ministers' convocation said. "That isn't just my own belief. Any honest teacher of college freshmen will say so."

Prize Crocodile Gulps Pop Bottle

Cincinnati, O. (AP)—Mark Anthony, the Cincinnati zoo's 13-foot, man-eating Nile crocodile, is just a baby, having lived only about 50 or 60 of his anticipated 200 years.

Like any baby, he likes to put things in his mouth. Things like sheep, or 40 pounds of horse meat.

But now he's gone too far. He has swallowed a pop bottle.

Mark sheds his teeth as a deer sheds his antlers and he happened to be losing a few when somebody dropped the pop bottle into his tank. His gums were sore, with new teeth coming through, so he used the bottle as a teether.

When his keepers tried to take it away, he would lie on it or hide it in his mouth. Keeper Robert Clemens said it would have been suicide for anyone to go into the tank to take the bottle away from Mark.

Then the thing everyone feared happened.

Willard Owens, the head keeper, was watching Mark suck the bottle. Owens looked away a moment. When he looked back, no bottle.

Some think Mark can live for years with the bottle lodged in his reptilian interior. Others think it may clog his intestines and cause death within a few weeks or months.

At any rate, Mark is worth $5,000. It would be a pity to lose him because of a two-cent soft drink bottle, Owens commented.
