Pointers Given On Taking Care Of Turkey Eggs

In cleaning turkey eggs, dry cleaning with fine sandpaper, steel wool and a knife for scraping, is preferable to washing, according to Noel Bennion, O.S.C. extension poultry specialist.

Quality of eggs and the manner in which they are cared for, packed and shipped, has a direct bearing on hatchability and an indirect affect on fertility, the specialist points out.

Good management includes egg gathering five to six times daily. After immediate cleaning, grading and checking for cracks, eggs should be cooled and stored at a temperature from 40 to 65 degrees in a room with a relative humidity of 90 per cent.

Eggs Classified

Many eggs that are classified as infertile, Bennion points out, are merely the result of improper care. Many were fertile, but the embryo died at an early age. There is a slight reduction in hatchability, he adds, where eggs are held longer than seven days. After 14 days in storage, the hatchability reduction increases rapidly.

Turkey eggs held more than one week require turning once daily.

Bennion states that eggs weighing between 32 and 38 ounces per dozen will hatch better than extremely large or small eggs. Loose or tremulous air cells will also reduce hatchability. He adds that clean eggs will hatch about 10 per cent better than will dirty eggs.

Eggs laid in a nest, meanwhile, average from 10 to 15 per cent better hatchability than eggs laid in the open.

Some Eggs Explode

Bacterial contamination which frequently results in eggs exploding in the incubator is generally most serious where soiled or washed eggs are used. Explosions of this type may result in contamination of other eggs in the incubator, and the organism that causes contamination may live through the ordinary cleaning fumigation, Bennion adds.

Breeding flocks which are frequently moved or rotated on sod pastures and limited to about 500 birds per flock produce the cleanest eggs with resulting better fertility and hatchability.

Portland Man Buys Ries Radio Record Dept.

Management of the record department in the Ries radio shop on Franklin avenue, yesterday was taken over by Stanley Hansen, former Portland resident, it was announced today.

Operation of the shop's radio department will continue under the management of A. A. Ries.

Hansen was choir director and organist for a number of churches in Portland. Prior to coming to Bend he was organist at St. Mary's cathedral in Portland. He also was accompanist for the Portland Ad club gleemen.

In conjunction with the operation of the record shop Hansen plans to carry lines of pianos and electronic organs.

He stated that he will have a Consonata organ on display at the shop next week.

Piano lines he is considering carrying include Mason-Hamlin and Winters.

Hansen is married and has a four-year-old son and seven-year-old daughter. He and his family reside at 434 Portland.

Stocks Display Firmer Tone

New York, Feb. 21 (AP)—Stocks developed a firm tone in the late trading today after an early decline had lowered the industrial and rail averages a few cents.

Leaders came back from their lows without developing any increase in volume. Meantime, traders continued to concentrate on special issues and special groups.

Steels were sustained by resumption of dividends on Crucible Steel preferred. Dividend resumption sent Newport Industries up substantially. Higher earnings helped Admiral Corp. advance. DuPont made a new high on its dividend. Skelly broke nearly 3 points when directors announced they were studying a 100 per cent stock dividend and then rallied sharply.

National Steel ran up to a new high at 102 1/2, up 2 1/2 points, and then met profit-taking which reduced the gain. The company directors proposed a three-for-one stock split and raised the dividend. Aircrafts continued to respond to outlook for higher earnings. Douglas made a new high. Auto issues met some support late in the session.

American Power new stock featured in turnover and equaled its high before meeting realizing that brought a small loss. Other utilities ruled firm in moderate trading.

Pittsburgh Gets Fancy Buildings

Pittsburgh (AP)—The once-smoky city of Pittsburgh is leading the world in construction of new and dramatic office buildings, according to W. K. Harrison, American architect.

Harrison, here to display scale models of his new Aluminum Company of America building, said a new American form of architecture is supplanting the old stone and mortar methods.

He pointed to two other Harrison-designed structures to emphasize his point. The Mellon-U. S. Steel building here and the United Nations building in New York both depend upon sturdy, light metals rather than the bulky materials of the past.

The aluminum exterior of the Alcoa building and the stainless steel outer surface of the Mellon-U. S. Steel building, he said, permit construction of interior walls much thinner than in the past.

The Alcoa building will be set back about 20 feet from the street and the resultant plaza will be landscaped, Harrison said. While the plaza will permit more sunlight to fall on the building, green-tinted windows will protect personnel from the sun's rays.

In addition to the two progressive Harrison buildings, the Equitable Life Assurance society plans to erect three modern buildings at the point of Pittsburgh's famed Golden Triangle in a city-wide beautification program.
