

10 Peace Points Believed Outlined To Block War

Lake Success, N.Y., May 25 (AP) — Trygve Lie's "10 points for peace" call for strengthening the United Nations through top level security council meetings, effective disarmament talks and the establishment of a UN army to prevent war, diplomatic sources said today.

The Norwegian secretary-general of the world organization was scheduled to leave London today, flying back to put before President Truman the reaction of Russian premier Josef Stalin to the 10 points and his other efforts to end the cold war.

The 10 points, according to diplomatic sources, were laid before Mr. Truman, British prime minister Clement Attlee, French premier Georges Bidault and Stalin in informal notes when Lie visited them on his "pilgrimage for peace" during the past three weeks.

Prospects Improve

Lie concluded his second round of conferences with French and British leaders yesterday. London reports said he saw a better than even chance on big power agreement within the year on a series of special security council meetings at least.

The points were regarded, like Woodrow Wilson's "14 points" at the end of world war I, as a collection of ideas to be discussed over a long period rather than a definite program of immediate action.

It was believed that Lie had succeeded in getting the ball rolling with them. During his talks in the capitals, it was understood, he gathered the ideas of the principals in the cold war and discussed with them many other aspects of the situation.

Ten Points Listed

UN secretariat sources refused to comment on Lie's "10 points," but well-placed informants in other reliable diplomatic circles said they were:

1. Periodic security council meetings to be attended by chiefs of state or their foreign ministers.
2. Resumption of east-west talks within the UN on the prohibition of atomic and hydrogen weapons and international control of atomic energy.
3. Resumption of UN talks on the reduction of conventional armaments, as distinguished from atomic weapons.
4. New efforts for agreement on the establishment of UN security forces — in effect, a UN army — which are provided for in the charter to be used against aggressors to keep the peace.
5. Membership suggested in the UN.
6. An active program of UN technical assistance to the world's backward areas.
7. More vigorous use of the UN's specialized agencies, such as the world health organization.
8. Development of the UN's work in the field of human rights and fundamental freedoms.
9. Use of the UN to promote the advancement of colonial and dependent peoples.
10. Use of the UN charter to "speed up the development of international law."

Hecklers Disrupt General's Talk

New York, May 25 (AP) — Gen. Lucius D. Clay, former American military governor of Germany, blamed "intolerance" today for an anti-fascist demonstration which almost broke up his Town Hall speech and interrupted traffic in Times Square.

Mounted police broke up the four-hour demonstration last night after more than 1,000 pickets had converged on Town Hall to protest a rally by Common Cause, Inc., an anti-communist organization. The pickets represented the American Jewish Labor conference.

Clay abandoned his prepared speech after a man in the audience interrupted him by yelling "What about Ise Koch and the human skin?" When Clay ignored the question, scores of others took up the cry. About 100 members of the audience walked out when police removed the heckler.

Attitude Decried

"I would say that the way these people acted tonight is the way I have seen freedom perish in Europe," Clay said. "In intolerance lies the greatest cause of misery for the human race."

The pickets charged that the rally, entitled "Hold Berlin," was a Nazi meeting "to re-nazify western Germany and fan the flames of war." Pamphlets passed out to pedestrians identified Clay as the former military governor who pardoned Ise Koch, the notorious mistress of Buchenwald concentration camp.
