

Commission May Ask Modification Of Restrictions

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—The U. S. atomic energy commission plans to ask congress next year to modify security restrictions on the A-bomb.

Chairman Gordon Dean, in a copyrighted interview with the Weekly News Magazine, U. S. News and World Report, says photographs of the bomb will be published some day, and it even may be possible to "put a dummy model in Macy's window."

Dean said some of the commission's security measures were made obsolete by British spy Klaus Fuchs who, he said, advanced Russian atomic research by one to two years. He found this "very, very disturbing."

Fuchs, who was cleared by British authorities to work on the joint allied A-bomb project during world war II, had complete access to the laboratories of the army-run Manhattan district from 1943 to 1946. Dean said he was one of "not more than" 150 scientists who "know all about the bomb."

Confession Made
An FBI tip led to Fuchs' arrest in London early this year, and he confessed supplying Russia with atomic secrets. Philadelphia chemist Harry Gold and eight other Americans later were arrested in this country on charges of helping the spy ring.

Fuchs is serving a 14-year sentence, and the Americans face trial.
Dean said the commission is studying possible relaxation of security on "superficial" information about the bomb's size and shape to simplify security, "not just to satisfy curiosity."

"The time may come," he said, "when as many as 300,000 or 400,000 people must know things at the operational level to have real readiness."
Such superficial information, however, is relatively "unimportant" to security, Dean said.

Questions Answered
Dean also answered several questions about which atomic officials heretofore have been evasive. He revealed that:

1. The nation's A-bomb stockpile is widely dispersed to minimize the danger of enemy sabotage.
2. The civilian commission has "technical custody" of the bombs, but practical arrangements will assure "no delay" in delivering them to the military in case of war.
3. Bomber crews which would deliver the bomb in event of war are specially trained; ordinary airmen do not know how to handle the weapon.
4. Russia's rich uranium deposits in Czechoslovakia and Saxony are being exhausted at a very rapid rate, but the Kremlin has access to "some other deposits which I prefer not to discuss."

Filipino Colonel Loses Command

Manila, Philippines, Nov. 21 (AP)—The government relieved Col. Mariano Azurin as commanding officer of the 10th Philippine battalion combat team in Korea today.

A defense department spokesman declined to explain the reason for the action, saying only that "it's a long story."
But other sources said that Azurin had asked President Elpidio Quirina to withdraw the battalion from Korea on grounds that he was not receiving equal treatment with American troops in the distribution of winter clothing and assignments.

Defense secretary Ramon Magsaysay ordered the relief of Azurin and designated Maj. Dionisio S. Ojeda, at present a United Nations observer in Korea, to assume command of the battalion with the temporary rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

Ojeda, 38, is a veteran of Bataan in world war II and an honor graduate of the Philippines Military Academy. He took advanced courses at the U. S. infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga. U. S. 8th army sources said yesterday that Philippine troops were treated the same as Americans in the distribution of winter clothing. They said the Filipinos, like the Americans with whom they were fighting, would get the last of their winter clothing today.

The United States has approximately 400,000 miles of railroad tracks.

Wind Whips Snow On Cascade Roads

High winds and some new snow made the going rugged along some Cascade passes today, and the state highway department, in its morning report of road conditions, advised motorists to carry chains.

Roadside depth of snow on the Santiam divide this morning was 42 inches. Some of this snow was on the move today, as stiff winds whipped over the summit. Some new snow was falling. Three inches of snow fell in the morning hours. There were spots of ice on the highway.

At Government camp, on the Mt. Hood route into Portland, the roadside depth of snow was 24 inches, with no new snow reported last night. There were occasional icy spots on the highway, and caution was advised in driving.

Bare pavement was reported from the Willamette pass this morning. The road side depth was 27 inches.
High winds whipped Timberline, on the south slope of Mt. Hood. These winds were reported "of marked violence" in the morning report.

In the Bend area, the weather today was generally clear and fair, following a mild November night.

Rasmussen

Other members of the team making the South African trip were Bill Jacobs, Oklahoma University; Johnny Voight, Oklahoma A. and M.; Clay Byran, Stanford; George Roscoe, University of California; Don Campbell, Colorado; Roy Greve and Jack Helzlsouer, both of Bradley; Dick Hart, Pennsylvania, and Fortune Gorton University of Minnesota. Gorton, according to Rasmussen, is the holder of the world's record in the discus throw.

The team was coached by Ralph Higgins, track coach at Oklahoma A. and M.
Rasmussen reports that he and his mates enjoyed the trip very much. However, it was not without mishap for Rasmussen. In one of the early meets he fell against one of his spiked shoes and tore several painful gashes in his left leg. The cuts have still not completely healed.

South Africa, according to the Bend youth, is "about a generation behind America," and is torn politically between two groups which settled the country, the British and the Dutch. An indication of the bitterness between the two peoples, he noted, is the refusal of either to learn the other's language.

Newspapers and signs over business establishments, and street markers are almost always printed in two languages, Rasmussen said.
The country also has a large population of native Negroes, who, he said, are discriminated against to a much greater degree than the Negroes in America's southern states.

Flood Waters

north and east of Sacramento to flee their homes. Many of them already were forced to leave by the week-end floods.

The swollen Kaweah, Tule and Kings rivers were expected to crest today and pour water into the Tulare lake basin, a farming area criss-crossed by irrigation canals.
Farmers and army engineers worked frantically to pour the waters into four man-made lakes in hopes they could be contained there, thus sparing farm houses and crops.

Snow Melting
New floods threatened on the Tuolumne and Stanislaus rivers as mountain storms washed down three-foot-deep snow. Water was coming down the Stanislaus at 30,000 second feet, near the record set in 1928. However, little further damage was expected.

Engineer Clifford Plummer said floods could be expected today along the Tuolumne river if the present rate of flow continues. The water was a foot below the spillway lip on the Don Pedro dam. The 10-foot flood gates were raised last night.

A levee broke on the Yuba river, about 10 miles east of Marysville, flooding two small towns, Hammon and Marigold. Hammon's 600 residents were evacuated last night when the break seemed imminent.

The seven deaths reported in California and Nevada included Mrs. Patterson, 31, of Sparks, who jumped to her death in the raging Truckee river near Reno. Paul Tomperry, Cecilville, Calif., Mrs. Ruby Clare Forks, Salmon, Calif., and Harry Chase, Klamath River, Calif., were believed drowned when their truck plunged from a 200-foot cliff into the Klamath river near Yreka Friday night.
Three other deaths were previously reported.

EMERGENCY DECLARED

Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 21 (AP)—An estimated 900 persons were driven from their homes in a suburban area north of here today and 6,000 more were alerted for evacuation as the American river rose five feet above flood stage.

Gov. Earl Warren formally declared a "state of emergency" existed as a result of the flood situation here and in the San Joaquin valley. His secretaries said the declaration allowed the state to furnish men, equipment and money to distressed local governments.

Setting new records each inch it rose, the American river crested at 45.4 feet at 7 a. m. today, and muddy water flowed over the 39-foot north bank into a newly developed residential section.
The sheriff's office estimated that 900 persons had been evacuated from their homes in the section, many of them by boat.
