

Long Island University Quits Intercollegiate Competition, As Result of Basketball Fix

By NORMAN MILLER (United Press Staff Correspondent) New York, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—Bitter-battered Long Island university dropped all intercollegiate sports today but a survey showed the majority of the nation's colleges would discount current scandals and continue to play basketball in Madison Square garden.

L.I.U., stunned by the arrest of four of its players on charges of "throwing" seven games in two years, announced it was cancelling the rest of its games this season and dropping all sports competition with other schools.

New York, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—Big league ball players don't want another "outsider" to be elected baseball commissioner.

The players, of course, have little or no official voice in the matter but if they had their way, the man who succeeds A. B. Chandler would come from the organized baseball ranks.

Some players claim Chandler did not show keen appreciation of their particular problems, never having played in the big time himself.

Others say they were given the "brush-off" when they wrote to the commissioner's office seeking advice on how to collect back pay or other funds due them.

One player says Chandler butted into his salary negotiations with a club owner and hampered rather than helped contractual matters.

"What does an 'outsider' know about our problems?" asked an American leaguer.

Were Not Asked

"Nobody ever asks us whom we would like as a commissioner," he added, "but I think we should have at least a little say in who is elected. Many of us would prefer a man in office who was familiar with the problems of a ball player."

Chandler's predecessor, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, had no baseball background to speak of when he moved off a federal bench and subsequently into the commissioner's office.

But the old judge caught on fast and, although he was tough as bark, he had a reputation for siding with the player rather than the club owner.

To be sure, there are players who have grown to like Chandler but the majority regard him as more of a politician than a bona fide baseball man.

Occasionally, when his name would come up in dugout conversation some players would inquire: "What does he know about baseball?"

Visited by Few

Generally speaking, the commissioner's office represents something of mysterious, mountain Shangri-la to most players. Few ever have occasion to visit it. In all fairness to Chandler, it must be said he made every effort to meet as many players as possible during spring training and the world series.

Most of these meetings took place on the field and consisted of little more than "how do you do?" or "how are you hitting?" The average player didn't tarry long, fearing perhaps, the label of an "apple polisher."

Chandler also made it a policy to congratulate the winner and sympathize with the loser. Following the 1950 world series, the commissioner offered his sympathetic best wishes to Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Phillies and then bolted for the Yankee dressing room.

He stood to the side as photographers snapped pictures of Casey Stengel hugging winning pitcher Eddie Ford. Then Casey noticed Chandler.

"C'mon, commissioner," called Casey, "you belong in the picture."

That, however, was five months ago.

KAHUT DEFEATED

Portland, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—Frank Buford, 20 1/2, Oakland, Calif., was awarded a split (2-1) decision over Joe Kahut, 18 1/2, Woodburn, Ore., last night in their 10-round boxing match here.

from the three L.I.U. stars, who police say have admitted throwing seven games during the past two seasons.

Sherman White, six-foot, seven-inch national scoring leader for L.I.U., turned over $5,000 which he had hidden in an envelope pasted to the back of a bureau drawer. L.I.U. team captain Adolph Bigos surrendered $5,500 which he had sewed into the lining of a topcoat, and playmaker Leroy Smith revealed $1,930 stuck in the toe of a shoe.

Earlier the police had received $5,060 from a safe deposit box belonging to accused C.C.N.Y. player Al Roth, and $3,050 which City college player Ed Warner had secreted in an old shoe box. There was no mention of a recovery from C.C.N.Y. player Ed Roman, L.I.U.'s Eddie Gray and New York university's Connie Schaff.

Renewal of Rose Bowl Pact Held Almost Certain

By William J. Coughlin (United Press Staff Writer)

San Francisco, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—Renewal of the Rose bowl pact by the Pacific Coast conference appeared near today as PCC officials headed for a two-day special session here tomorrow and Friday.

An unofficial United Press survey of the nine schools of the conference indicated the pact will be renewed—with reservations—when faculty representatives, university presidents and athletic directors convene at the Cliff hotel.

Al Masters, director of athletics at Stanford university, said today that he favored retention of the Rose bowl pact, and also continuation of the agreement with the Big Ten. However, he wants some changes made.

"I'm in favor of continuing the Rose bowl pact for the PCC," said Masters, "and I like the agreement with the Big Ten."

Seek Uniform Rules "But I believe that the Big Ten and the PSS should have uniform rules and regulations on sending teams to the bowl."

Under the present set-up, the PCC sends its champion every year—and when a club, such as California, wins the crown three times in a row, that means it has a post-season tilt three years in succession. On the other hand, the Big Ten will not allow any one team to come to the bowl often more than once in three years.

"I'm in favor of allowing no one school to go oftener than once in two years, no matter how many times it wins the crown," said Masters.

Such a set-up would be regarded as a compromise between the two conferences.

Owing to the revenue gains by all schools in the PCC, it is believed that enough votes will be available to swing retention of the pact. Such small schools as Washington State and Idaho are reported to be in favor of the post-season game. Add them to USC, UCLA and Stanford and the balance of power would swing for retention.

Brutus Hamilton, director of athletics at University of California, says he will go into the sessions with an open mind.

"I realize that there is a lot of good connected with the Rose bowl as well as some things that are not good for collegiate athletics," says Hamilton. "I'm going to the sessions willing to listen to both sides of the problem." The gathering, which meets with an open agenda, also may consider 1952 football schedules; the possibility of eligibility for freshmen on varsity sports; and television.
