Huckleberries Not Plentiful

Bend and central Oregon huckleberry pickers can still get their favorite mountain fruit in the patches around Huckleberry lake on the McKenzie, it was stated today by forest service officials. Reports say that the huckleberries are not nearly so plentiful as in former years.

Huckleberrying in the Mount Hood area is out for this season as a result of the forest closure due to forest fire hazards.

HEARING OPENS Portland, Aug. 21 (UP)—The first public hearing on Oregon's fair employment practice law—passed in 1949—opened today before State labor commissioner W. E. Kimsy. Five Negroes charge they were discriminated against by the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen union, local No. 932, in Portland. The five complain that the union local rejected their applications for membership because of their race.

Little Hope Because of rulings in similar cases in the state, men on strike in the woods apparently have small hope of receiving compensation. There appears to have been a possibility that men employed in the mill here would have received consideration, if their log supply had been exhausted and they were still willing to work, according to street-corner discussions. However, it is pointed out, plant men also went on strike when "hot logs" were reportedly dumped in the mill pond this past week.

Unemployment compensation commission staff members here said they were not privileged to make public the number of men who have applied for compensation.

There were no new developments in the strike locally up until noon today.

Man Gets Fuel, And Pay Also Clarksburg, Mass. (UP)—A Clarksburg man found a way to get paid for getting in his winter's supply of wood.

First he got a job with a road construction company at $1.34 hourly. Then he got permission to take some maple trees being felled for the highway.

Working at night, he managed to lug off enough wood for the winter and piled it near his house. After he had all the wood he needed, the man quit and took his pay, $21.

Scant Hope Held For Restoration Of Defense Cut

Washington, Aug. 21 (UP)—Officials looked with scant hope today to the senate to restore the almost 90 per cent cut from civil defense funds by the house despite warnings the nation is living in an atomic "fool's paradise."

Ignoring statements that Russia has bigger and more potent atom bombs than previously believed, a penny-pinching house last night voted to give civil defense only $65,255,000 of the $535,000,000 asked.

House democratic leaders argued vainly that the cut in funds for economic stabilizer, Eric A. Johnston's agency would cripple the price control program.

All told, the supplemental bill carried $1,586,587,317, compared with an overall request of $2,302,871,114.

Civil defense administrator Millard F. Caldwell and Johnston were said to be prepared to carry their fight to the senate to try to get partial restoration of the funds knocked out by the house. But with senators as anxious as house members to save every dollar they can, the chances were slim that the two agencies would get substantially more.

In addition to the funds for civil defense and economic stabilization, the supplemental bill carried $800,000,000 for the general services administration to stockpile strategic and critical materials, $250,000,000 for the atomic energy commission to expand its facilities, $47,550,000 for government and relief in areas occupied by American troops, and dozens of other items.

Only boost was an increase in funds earmarked for the bureau of narcotics from $250,000 to $400,000.

Strikers Apply For Benefits

Second week of the strike in the Brooks-Scanlon, Inc., woods and Bend plant finds a large number of employees of the big pine firm signing up for unemployment benefits. It was learned here today following the visit of a representative of the state unemployment compensation commission, Walter Wetzler. He conferred with both union leaders and mill officials, to obtain background information that can be used by the commission in passing on the benefit applications.

No ruling has yet been made on the local applications for compensation, but it is known that strikers in the past have been excluded from receiving such pay, if work is available. Clark Price, head of the local unemployment compensation office, is on vacation this week, but members of his staff said no action is taken on the applications locally. They are forwarded to the state office and will be acted on individually. It was for the purpose of obtaining the necessary background information that Wetzler conferred here with union and mill representatives.

Sun Spots Cited as Reason For Dry Spell, Reported

By Elizabeth Tooney (United Press Staff Correspondent) New York (UP)—Philip Courtney, president of a perfume and cosmetics company, is worried about sun spots.

He said if something doesn't happen soon to bring rain to southern France and Italy, the perfume industry will be faced with a crisis. No rose... no jasmine... no neroli.

"I'd say about 75 per cent of all perfumes contain one of those three flowers," Courtney said gloomily. "Drought has almost ruined all three crops."

Courtney, a former Paris banker who entered the perfume business 12 years ago, is inclined to blame his problems on sun spots.

"Why not?" he shrugged. "It is a usual thing to blame our economic calamities on sun spots. The only thing to do now is to hope that by prayers we will have a good crop next year."

His company, Coty, Inc., has a supply of the essential flower oils to last until 1952, Courtney said. "A bad crop again next year would be a catastrophe," he said. "You can't find a kilo of jasmine on the market for anything to day. Another bad crop might mean that perfume prices would go up next year."

Besides sudden rainfall, there's another hope perfume makers are clinging to. Experiments to grow the essential flowers are being conducted in North Africa, Morocco and Turkey.

"The Turks are sending us samples," all the time Courtney said. "They are trying to raise a rose to compare to the Bulgarian rose so essential in many perfumes."

A combination of drought and the iron curtain has cut off most of the Bulgarian crop too.

"In times of world crisis it is hard to exaggerate the problems of perfume manufacturers," the former French citizen admitted. "But believe me, this is all very serious business to us."

War Declared On Black Fly

Albany, N. Y. (UP)—Hunters are out in the central Adirondack region for game that you can't knock down with a bullet.

The troublesome black fly is being blasted with DDT throughout the area by crews paid for by resort owners. Since black fly control was started several years ago, resort proprietors have been able to add almost two months to the profitable vacation season.

The annual war against the black fly started this year by aerial bombardment with DDT of a 100-mile remote wilderness area.

Boasting Gets Man in Trouble

Tulsa, Okla. (UP)—A little boasting got Eugene Monroe, 29, in a lot of trouble here.

A Tulsa police picked him up on a misdemeanor charge and considered him a routine prisoner until they intercepted a note he tried to slip to another prisoner describing himself as "the hottest thing in Tulsa."

Sure enough he was. A check with the FBI showed his fingerprints matched those found on a venetian blind in the apartment of a Tulsa rape-murder victim, the number one unsolved case in town.

Russians Use Slave Labor

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 21 (UP)—The Russians are using some 120,000 anti-communist slave laborers to extract uranium from about 40 deep mines in the Jachymov area of west Czechoslovakia, refugees who escaped from there said today.

They said the prisoners work underground for 10 hours a day in what amounts to "a slow death."

Most of them are Czechs, according to the refugees, although there are some court-martialed soviet soldiers. The latter are kept in special compounds.

The refugees escaped after wrecking the power system of their camp and rendering harmless the high voltage wires guarding the compound.

YOUTH DIES

Hermiston, Aug. 21 (UP)—Ronald Goslar, 18, Stanfield, Ore., died of injuries last night raising the death count to two in an auto crash here early Sunday. Ruth Asher, 16, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Asher, Hermiston, died earlier. The auto in which the couple were riding was driven by Goslar. Witnesses, according to state police, said the vehicle disregarded flares and crashed into a parked truck that was stalled because a previous accident blocked a bridge.

TRIAL SET Oregon City, Aug. 21 (UP)—The trials of 10 men, charged with anti-gambling law violations following a March 30 raid by police in Clackamas county, will open here August 27. The first defendant will be Frank Loves of Molalla. He was indicted for permitting gambling in his building.

District attorney Leonard Lindas expected the trials to average a day apiece in court.
