Millinery Class Planned in Bend

Mrs. Albert H. Jorgensen will be instructor for a recreation course in millinery, it was announced today by Wayne Hamilton, director of the Bend Recreation Department. The organization meeting will be held Monday, March 31, at 7:30 p. m. in the Commission room of the City Hall. Regular meeting nights will be determined at that time.

A fee of $10 will cover 10 three-hour lessons, and will include foundation materials for four hats, it was announced. Fabrics to cover the foundations, trims and any hats to be remodeled will be furnished by the students. The City Recreation Department will furnish blocks, which will be available for rental after completion of the course.

The course will include choosing the becoming hat, cleaning and reusing millinery materials, trimming and remodeling and making and covering buckram frames, including one purchased frame. Apt pupils who complete three basic types of hats may go on to other materials such as blocking fur felt, working with straw braid, sewing wool felt, etc. Mrs. Jorgensen will demonstrate her own method of cutting patterns on the block.

Classes will be limited to 12 persons. Mrs. Jorgensen is a graduate of the Louis Miller School of Millinery.

CARS IN ACCIDENT

Cars operated by Miss Nora Lalor, Portland, and Mrs. Clarence Raper, 644 East Marshall, Bend, were involved in a traffic accident at Bond and Greenwood this morning when Miss Lalor attempted to turn into a service station. Both cars suffered some damage, but no one was injured. Witnesses said a frosted windshield on Miss Lalor's car was possibly a factor in the minor accident. Mrs. Raper was driving west on Greenwood when the accident occurred. Miss Lalor is hospital nursing consultant in maternal and infant care, Oregon State board of health.

Train Passenger In Custody After Shooting Spree

LIMON, Colo., March 21 (AP)—A passenger aboard the Union Pacific streamliner "Pony Express" summoned a porter then shot him four times.

The Limon town marshal, called to the scene when the passengers aboard the train were thrown into near panic by the shooting, in turn shot the passenger when he refused to hand over his pistol.

The porter, James B. Ervin of Denver, was wounded three times in the left thigh and once in the right by bullets fired from under a blanket covering Emery Moore of Kansas City, Mo.

Ervin said he knew no reason why Moore should shoot him. He said Moore "kept ringing all the time for me to come back and give him service. I treated him real nice."

Ervin, hospitalized in Denver, said Moore rang for him just as the train pulled into Limon Thursday.

Covered by Blanket

"He was all covered by the blanket," Ervin said. "That's why when I heard a noise I thought it was a toy noise maker. I never felt any pain—I guess I was shot by then."

At that point, Ervin said, Moore took his hand out from under the blanket and pointed the pistol at him.

"He shot three more times before I could get away. I could feel those bullets all right. I guess I'm lucky he didn't shoot a little higher... I'd be dead now."

Town Marshal George Mariner was summoned immediately.

"The guy was sitting there with his gun in his hand," Mariner said. "I told him to drop it—he was sitting there half naked and looking dazed."

"I asked him three times to drop it—and he just kept mumbling. All of a sudden he lifted the gun and pointed it at me. I didn't wait to see if he would fire. I shot first at his leg."

Moore, however, said from his Denver hospital bed that he fired after he felt someone trying to get his wallet while he napped in his berth on the train.

He was mad "I was lying in my bunk when I heard a guy fumbling around outside my bunk," he told Sheriff Merlin H. Koerner. "I was mad. I had about $100 or $200 in my wallet."

Moore said he went and got his gun out of a suitcase. He said he fired low on purpose. "I knew I hit him," Moore said. "I heard people telling me to drop the gun, but I was so mad that I didn't pay any attention to them." He said he was on a trip to visit his brother in Englewood, Colo. Ervin and conductor Frank Wolfe told Mariner that Moore had been drinking before the shooting.

Winona Services Held Thursday

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the Niswonger-Winslow chapel for Ruby M. Winona, 41, who died Saturday morning following a prolonged illness. She had been a Tumalo resident two years.
