

Women Needed For Red Cross Overseas Jobs

Immediate recruitment of women to staff Red Cross clubs for American military personnel stationed in critical areas of the world as been cited as a major objective of the organization, according to word received from the Pacific area offices in San Francisco.

Deschutes Chapter Chairman B. Fundingsland has been notified by Sam B. Montgomery, Red Cross Pacific area manager, that the need primarily for three classes of club workers is serious. Maintaining morale of troops still stationed in Korea has made that the first area to be staffed.

Classification of jobs to be held are club aide and club workers on two, with salary ranges at $230 to $280, $244 to $304, and $1 to $351, respectively.

World wide mobility, or agreement of the worker to accept a post anywhere in the world, is a major requirement. Other qualifications include college degrees preferred; experience or training in group leadership and recreation; entertainment or allied fields; specific recreation or entertainment skills; ability to perform clerical or secretarial work; ability to drive a car, valuable but not essential, and preferred ages between 23 and 30.

Typical duties for club workers include building housekeeping and maintenance; overseeing the provision of such personal services as showers, barber shops, mending service, etc.; supervising snack bars, planning and managing recreation facilities; providing leadership of entertainments, tours, parties, etc.; staffing mobile units, providing canteen and entertainments, and serving as an entertainer.

Other Areas Following the staffing of Korean clubs, women will be recruited for work in Europe and in North Africa, according to the Red Cross disclosure.

Women in the Central Oregon area who are interested in the project, and who feel themselves qualified, are being asked to contact Deschutes chapter of the Red Cross, telephone 437, in Bend, The office, located in the J. C. Penney building, is open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. weekdays.

SALEM, Aug. 21—The uncertainty of fall school openings due to unreasonable crop harvesting, today, brought a reminder of child labor regulations as they affect Oregon farmers from state labor Commissioner W. E. Kimsey.

Kimsey said that according to federal child labor law it is illegal for any farmer to employ a child under the age of 16, other than his own children, during school hours. When schools are not in session there is no restriction on the employment of minors in agriculture.

Brave Little POW Gave His Buddies Spirit to Resist

INCHON, Korea, Aug. 21 (AP)—A skinny little American POW martyr, died himself and gave his fellow prisoners the spirit to resist Communism by defying the Reds on a parade ground.

"He rushed out there in front of everyone, when they fell us out for roll call," said Sgt. Lloyd W. Pate of Jacksonville, Fla., "and warned them that America would take revenge someday for what they were doing to us."

"Americans should know what happened that day. He was just a little kid starving to death and sick, and he was down to skin and bones."

Shouts at Chinese "But he stepped out of ranks, raised his fists at the Chinese and began shouting: 'I only have one thing to live for, and that is for the day Uncle Sam comes and frees us. After they come I am willing to die, but you can't kill me before they do.'"

Pate said the Chinese immediately seized the pain-wrecked youth and rushed him into a small mud hut.

"We could hear him screaming all that night," Pate said. "The next day the Chinese said the rats had killed him."

Killed by Bullet "I was on a burial detail up on the hill when they took him up and threw him in a hole, Pete said. 'He had been eaten by rats all right. 'But right in the middle of his forehead was a bullet hole.'"

Pete said the boy's bravery inspired his fellow American POWs to a new spirit.

"Right there and then most of us decided that Communism was something evil and that we had to fight it."

Milk

(Continued from Page 1) said consumption of milk in Bend is high during vacation months owing to tourist influx, while in Madras it drops off since schools are closed. On the other hand, in October there tends to be an excess of milk in Bend and a shortage in Madras, Prineville and Redmond rural areas during harvesting.

A pool, he felt, would equalize that situation, as well as payments to producers from the distributors.

Kenneth Greene, Madras producer and secretary of the C. O. M. P. A., testified that he thought if a pool were established, the milk could effectively be distributed in the area, providing it was economically feasible.

He wondered if a pool would pay its way, and requested the administration to furnish data which he believed available in their office on the actual situation in Central Oregon as to when various distributors had surpluses and when they had shortages.

Bertil Nelson, Bend producer, gave figures on pay-outs from Medo-Land Creamery on seven days during the period October 31, 1952, through April 15, 1953, showing low amounts paid for surplus milk.

He felt that a pool might better that set-up, inasmuch as that period included the time of shortages in some areas.

A recently established Prineville distributor, Travis Allen, testified that he desired whatever would be best for everyone, and that he neither favored nor opposed a pool.

He did say that in view of the Prineville situation last winter, a pool would probably have been a help. He didn't know if an effort had been made there to obtain possible surplus milk from Bend.

George Hostetter claimed that distributors in both Prineville and Bend knew then of the surplus in Bend. Allen said he was not qualified to say.

Hostetter, Redmond producer, said he had changed his attitude during the past year from opposing to favoring a pool, giving as reasons the changed conditions in this area, recent new milk products on the market and low pay-outs for surplus.

It is now a confusing situation, he said, and a pool manager could look after it. Walter Smead, Bend producer, opposed formation of a pool, stating that he believed the producers could look out for themselves, and work with their distributors, and questioned that a pool would assure better prices to producers.

Smead did not testify formally. Lewis Nichols, Madras distributor, in testimony favored the general principle of a pool but was not sure of its detailed workings.

Mrs. Laura Wonsler, Bend distributor, said that surplus milk simply wasn't available anywhere in Central Oregon at times, such as last October.

Dean to Speak

Oregon State college enthusiasts will have an opportunity next Monday to discuss school affairs informally with Dean Poling, dean of men, who will be among OSC representatives at a potluck dinner at the Mirror pond residence of Walter Peak.

Prospective OSC "Beavers" will be honored guests at a potluck dinner being arranged by local members of the Oregon State College federation for Monday, Aug. 24 at the Walter Peak residence, 637 Drake road.

Along with parents, friends, students, and alumni of the college, new students will have an opportunity to talk informally with four officials of the school. Led by Dean of Men Dan Poling, the college representatives will be Dallas Norton, director of admissions, Ralph Coleman, baseball coach and professor of physical education, and Bob Knoll, alumni manager.

Mrs. Victor Dahlin is chairman of the local committee making arrangements for the evening's program. She is being assisted by Glenn H. Gregg.

Questions on phases of college curriculum, housing, fees, entrance requirements, activities, and like matters will be answered by the four representatives. New students are invited to bring their parents.

The potluck is scheduled to begin at 6 p. m.

'Deadwood' Due To Be Eliminated In Mailing Lists

SALEM, Aug. 21 (AP)—Purchase of mechanical equipment approved by the 1953 Legislature will expedite elimination of "deadwood" names from registration lists in sending out primary and general election voters pamphlets. Secretary of State Earl T. Newbury said today.

He estimated the financial saving to taxpayers might reach $15,000 in a biennium.

In the past it has taken some 40 persons to address stickers for the pamphlets. Most of these will be eliminated by the new equipment.

Newbury said current records show thousands of pamphlets are unclaimed because the persons to whom they were mailed have moved without leaving a forwarding address, or have died.

Another meeting is planned for late next week, and the board agreed they would probably meet regularly more often than once a month in the future.
