By Thanksgiving, the ski season promises to be in full swing through-out the state. Personally, I've scal-loped a dozen sitzmarks in the side of the hill for every run I've made without a mishap. Furthermore, I live in mortal terror of sprained ankles and torn ligaments suffered ankles and torn ligaments suffered in younger and more audacious days—when a do-or-die spirit thought it could conquer any slope. Fortunately for the chalet operators, mine is not the majority opinion. Or maybe it is, judging by the proportion of so-called "lodge skiers" to honest-to-goodness devotees of the sport. The ratio seems to favor the former about three to one.

All reports indicate that Oregon's ski facilities are drawing bigger crowds each year. The splendor of the Cascade wonderland is doubtless a contributing factor. The relatively early snowfall is surely anoner.

Scanty December snows have long irked California resort people. (No one thinks of skiing in November there.) Gay, mad college crowds throng to the mountains over the holidays in anticipation of romantic Christmas and New Year's Eves in pine-scented lodges after a day in the snow.

Claude Cook announces a change in the Bruins' basketball schedule which advances Albany from Jan. 1-2 to Dec. 11-12. This will give the Lava Bears another week of competition after the Prineville Jubilce Dec. 4 and another week of rest following the Holidays.

Random notes: The Central Oregon School Men's Association meets in Sisters Wednesday, Nov. 25 to schedule this season's basketball for eighth grade, frosh, and junior varsity teams in the area. To solve a series of officiating snafus that have come up through the years, the Central Oregon Officials Association has been formed. Bill Burgess, Crook County high school principal, is chairman of the group. Jim Brown, Redmond, and Keith Jacobs, Culver, are commissioners. They will designate officials for each game, relieving the schools of the chore which had become so troublesome.
