

Luelling Named No. 1 Cattleman

Special to The Bulletin
MADRAS—Roy Luelling, a life-long resident of Jefferson county, has been named the 1954 Jefferson county "Cattleman of the Year," by the selection committee of the Jefferson County Livestock Growers and Feeders Association.

The choice was made in conjunction with state competition handled by the Oregon Cattlemen's association. Robert and Andrew Morrow were joint 1953 winners of the title.

Luelling, who was born June 20, 1911, on the homestead of Stel Luelling in Jefferson county, operates a 1,420-acre ranch on the North Unit Irrigation project.

Approximately 130 acres of the ranch are under water, and 32 acres of this are pasture with a carrying capacity of about three head an acre. Hay and other crops, including Kenland red clover, oats, and barley, are also grown on the irrigated land.

Grazing Spread Used
 The dryland, adjacent to the irrigated portion, contains 1390 acres of improved grazing land and crop land which includes 64 acres of wheat, four acres of barley, and 53 acres of summer fallow.

Crested wheatgrass, in three to eight-year-old stands, occupies 120 acres of the rangeland.

Luelling is running from 70 to 75 head of cows this year, with an almost equal number of calves produced yearly. In addition to the cow-calf program, he fattens his own steers and a few purchased steers.

Cows are wintered on hay and clover straw and chaff, plus having access to the winter range constituting several hundred acres. The calves are wintered on pasture hay and alfalfa hay.

The Jefferson county rancher is one of the few in the area to carry his program through the entire cycle of the ranching operation. He takes the program from the cow to the feed lot to the market.

Efficiency Noted
 Although he now markets between 65 to 75 head of steers annually, in 1940, 30 to 40 head were sold, reflecting an efficiency increase of almost 100 per cent in 14 years.

Luelling will receive a plaque commemorating his selection, and will enter regional competition with winners from Crook, Deschutes, Wheeler, Morrow, and Sherman counties. A state champion selected from top cattlemen in five Oregon regions, will be named.

Luelling is a member of the Jefferson County Growers and Feeders association, the livestock extension committee, the Oregon Cattlemen's association, and the National Livestock association.

He is a member of the Farmer's Union, is a director of the board of the Gray Butte Grazing association, and is a director and chairman of the Gateway school board.

Under ideal water conditions adult Pacific salmon has been known to leap 8 to 10 feet in the air during upstream spawning migrations.

Lions Discover New Lava Cave

Special to The Bulletin
REDMOND—Possibility that another large cave may be opened very soon was expressed by a spokesman for the Redmond Lions club who are continuing their excavating at Redmond Caves. The extensive domed ceiling of an apparently large cavern is now visible, lying to the east of Lions cave and in the same general direction, but entrance is blocked by powdery pumice and rocks. Lions cave is about 100 yards west of the present digging.

Supervising the excavating is city superintendent John H. Berning. Volunteer crews of Lions in organized work parties have been using a scoopmobile. It is reported that quantities of pumice material have been removed allowing entrance into about the first 15 feet of the presumed cave. Men have been working in the early evening hours, but it will soon be necessary to use lights to aid the digging.

Few Artifacts Found
 To date no artifacts of any consequence have been located, according to Lions spokesman Malcolm Johnson. Workers have found some flint chips and bones. Johnson advises that the public are welcome to inspect the caves but requests that no digging be done. The Federal Antiquities act is in force at the caves. This act forbids removal of artifacts from federal land. Amateur archeologists, however, may dig under supervision at specified places if they wish, Johnson says. Persons who wish to sift the sands for remnants of another age are asked to contract him to make arrangements for supervised digging.

State Highway Deaths Climbing

By UNITED PRESS
 A load of logs fell against a moving car north of Medford yesterday and killed two men, bringing Oregon's toll of highway deaths on Tuesday and Wednesday to five.

Earl Woodley, 53, Dufur, and his 85-year-old father, Clark Eugene Woodley of Grants Pass, were identified by state police as the victims in the log mishap. The younger Woodley's wife, Zetha, was in critical condition in a Medford hospital.

State police said a log truck driven by William Edward Short of Eagle Point was coming downhill when a block holding the logs gave way. The logs smashed into the side of the Woodley car just as it was passing, smashing it against a guard rail.

The accident occurred about 35 miles north of Medford near Cascade gorge.

In other traffic deaths, Mrs. Fanny Miller, 75, Campo, Colo., was killed Tuesday night in an accident two miles south of Woodburn; John Stamules Armas Jr., 27, Walla Walla, died in a La Grande hospital early yesterday after his car crashed into a tree; and Leslie (Leck) Willett, died at Wallowa from injuries suffered in a two-car collision.

Strike Delayed So Queen Mother Could Take Trip

LONDON (UP)—Tugboatmen at Southampton delayed joining the nationwide waterfront strikes so that Queen Mother Elizabeth could sail today for the United States and Canada without inconvenience.

But even as the Queen Mother departed aboard the Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth, the paralyzing series of wildcat walkouts threatened to grow. The 3,000 men who operate the Manchester Ship Canal gave notice of a strike for higher pay.

Already, some 45,000 of the nation's 75,000 longshoremen were out, with 283 ships idle and 32 undermanned in the stricken ports. Sympathy strikes by allied waterfront workers spread the paralysis.

London and Birkenhead were completely shut down. Liverpool, Britain's second largest port, was badly crippled. Most stevedores were out at Hull, Garston and Rochester. Only a handful worked at Southampton.

Wednesday, 20 stevedores stepped out of the picket line in answer to a call for volunteers and loaded the Queen Mother's baggage aboard the Queen Elizabeth.

Then, the Southampton tugboat crewmen delayed their expected strike vote until after the ship sailed for New York.

The Queen Elizabeth left on schedule and was assisted from its berth by tugs in the normal manner. When the giant liner arrived two days ago it had backed into its dock so it could leave if necessary without the help of tugs.

It was the Queen Mother's first trans-Atlantic voyage aboard the ship named for her and which she christened. She will remain in America three weeks.

The U.S. Lines passenger ship America sailed on time Wednesday afternoon with volunteers loading passengers baggage.

Shaw Still Tops In Total Offense

NEW YORK (UP)—George Shaw of Oregon continues to lead the nation's football players in total offense but Paul Larson of California has taken over the pass-completion lead.

Shaw has a total of 845 yards in five games, 748 of them by passing. The Webfoot ace has completed 53 of 106 passes.

Larson has completed 54 of 86 passes, although his yardage total is 678. Larson's total offense figure, good enough for second best in the country, is 673 yards, since he has lost three rushing.

Kiwanians Hear Talk by Coon

Special to The Bulletin
REDMOND—Republican candidate Sam Coon, seeking election as United States representative from the second Congressional district, gave a talk before Redmond Kiwanians Wednesday that was largely non-political. At Ponderosa Lumber Sales, mill work was stopped for a period while Coon discussed the issues in the present campaign and answered questions put to him by the employees.

Coon refuted the implications made by his campaign opponents that the Republicans are seeking to "give away" public resources. He cited legislation he had introduced in the House which provides access roads in public forests and stated that he will do everything he can to develop a sustained yield in our forests.

Chamber of Commerce Manager Jay Shively and M. A. Lynch escorted and introduced Coon while he was in Redmond. He talked informally with business men during the day. On the Hells Canyon issue Coon said that in 1950 Senator Guy Gordon had introduced a bill providing for a high dam on the Snake River, but it had been turned down by his Democratic colleagues in the Senate. Determination of the kind of power development to be made on the Snake is in the hands of the Federal Power Commission, Coon said. That body might decide that one high dam would be more effective than several smaller ones. It is also conceivable, he said, that private capital could build a single high dam.

At the Kiwanian luncheon Coon outlined the process whereby a bill becomes law in the house and touched only briefly on political issues, referring particularly to the "phony" issues of give-away program.
