Shower Party For Fay Lentz Held Thursday

Miss Fay Lentz, bride-elect of John Clements, was honored at a surprise shower party last Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Wilfred A. Fordham.

The gifts were arranged on a table behind an archway decorated with pink and white streamers, draped back with pink bows. A bride doll was the central decorative note.

Games provided the entertainment, and the honoree opened her gifts. The serving of refreshments, featuring small iced cakes inscribed with the names of the engaged couple, completed the evening's activities.

Present at the party, in addition to the hostess and the honoree and her mother, Mrs. Everett Lentz, were the following: Mrs. Carson Call and daughters, Judy and Susie; Mrs. Cora Shumway; Mrs. Douglas Day; Mrs. Noel Day; Mrs. Ben Packard; Mrs. Lawrence Nicholson; Mrs. Mrs. Claude Wanchek; Mrs. Eugene McBride; Mrs. Calvin Charmon; Mrs. A. B. Estebenet Jr.; Miss Arla Fordham; Mrs. Ernest Darr and daughter, Joanne; Mrs. Ray Anderson; Mrs. Kate Chapman; Mrs. Dean Norton and Miss Pat Stokoe.

The wedding will be an event of Sunday, Jan. 16, at First Baptist church.

For Young Look, Beauty Expert Says "Chins Up"

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

It's her neckline that gives a mature woman as much trouble as any single aspect of her looks. She peers in the mirror and feels as though she were looking at the rings on a tree—she can count her years there. And she doesn't want to have to do this.

Much of the preaching today about overexposure is aimed at men and women of mature years. And, as she loses weight, a mature woman's neckline takes on years as it grows slack.

For a woman who has not lost a lot of weight, the problems of the neckline go with the problems of posture. If a woman walks upright with a good head carriage, she should not have a dowager chin.

But for a woman who has peeled off many pounds, the problem becomes more difficult.

She should massage the loose skin that used to cover all that flesh with a camphor tissue cream. Work from the tip of the chin firmly down onto the chest. Then dash on cold water to tighten the skin. If she has time, a dieting mature woman should do this twice a day.
