FLYING FIRE TRUCK—something different in fighting fires is the aim of the Piasecki Helicopter Corp. of Morton, Pa. As an artist has illustrated the idea above, a specially designed 'copter could reach burning planes downed on mountainsides, in swamplands, forests or other places inaccessible to wheeled equipment. Rescue workers would be lowered to the ground while the flying fire truck hovers over the fire spraying an extinguisher from its crane-like front. Flames would be kept away from the 'copter by its whirling rotors. The manufacturer says it could be used in fighting fires in upper stories of high buildings. Note truck bogged down in swamp.

'Operation Smart' Involves Building Rocket Sled Track

By MURRAY M. MOLER
United Press Staff Correspondent

HURRICANE, Uta — (UP) — A 12,000 - foot long trench in a 300-foot-wide, muddy clearing atop Pioneer Mesa, three miles northeast of Hurricane, marks the location of a unique project in American military history.

By mid - summer, the trench will have been transformed into the underpinning of a rocket sled track that will be used by the armed services in testing ways that crews could use to escape from super - sonic aircraft in emergencies.

The multi - million dollar project is code - named "Operation Smart." The name is derived from the initials of the project—Supersonic Military Air Research Track.

The Utah rocket sled track will be an extension of the pioneer Navy installation near Mojave, Calif., and the Air Force's famed project at Almogordo, N. M., where an officer recently travelled more than 600 miles an hour on a sled.

Cargo Keeps Going

The Pioneer Mesa development will have one major difference. The older tracks were equipped so that the sleds, after travelling at high speed, stopped at the end.

In Utah, the sled will stop but its cargo — instruments or dummies, with human passengers excluded — will be shot on off into space, in a duplication of the effect of ejecting a pilot's cockpit from a jet fighter or bomber.

The south end of the mesa, where the track will end, is a sandstone cliff. The "cap - rock," geologists call it the Shinerump formation, forms a wall some 200 feet straight up and down.

Below the cap rock, the rock and sluffed - off sand descends so sharply that the test capsule need be shot only a few hundred feet off the end of the mesa to have a vertical descent of 1,500 feet.

That is why the Pioneer Mesa was selected for the development after studies that included surveys of a score or more possible sites in this country and even on oceanic islands.

Preliminary work including carving of a 10 per cent grade road up the cliff, began last fall under an over-all contract let to the Coleman Engineering Co., Los Angeles.

Water Essential

The Las Vegas, Nev., firm Lembke, Clough and King has the major contract for preparation of the sled track itself and its work, which began early in the year, must be finished by about June 1.

So far, scrub cedar atop the mesa has been cleared on the track site and in areas to be occupied by supply structures and the enclosed firing revetment, from which the experiments will be controlled by crews protected from rocket blasts by thick walls.

Instrument mounts — now used by surveyors but later to hold cameras — have been carefully installed at 28 locations on the edge of the clearing. The track, six feet, eight inches wide when finished, will be in the middle.

The mesa is generally level, but considerable work still must be done to fill in a few gullies and blast off some rocky projections to make the site perfect.

Already completed is a three-inch pipeline carrying water from a pumping station on the Virgin River, below the mesa, up the rim rock to the sled site. Water is vital for all operations, particularly that of filling a trough that serves as a brake for the speeding sled.

Most of the construction workers now live in Hurricane, three miles airline to the southwest; La-Verkin, just north of Hurricane; or Virgin, a few miles southeast. A few reside in St. George, Utah, 20 miles to the southwest.

Rubber Roads Get New Tests

CHICAGO — (UP) — The American Public Works Association says highway officials are awaiting with interest the outcome of tests of 'rubber roads."

During the last five years experimental patches of surfacing containing rubber have been laid on selected stretches of roads throughout the country, the association said.

Connecticut, Louisiana, Nebraska, Ohio, Utah and Wisconsin are among states that have such experimental patches of road.

Proponents of "rubber roads" hope they will prove to be longer lasting, skid - proof and more resilient.

But a major disadvantage, the association said, has been the high cost. However, researchers hope they have this problem licked.

Originally, asphalt and rubber were mixed at a chemical plant and shipped hot in insulated trucks or railroad tank cars to the construction sites. This limited the shipping range to a 24-hour trip from the plant.

A combination of tar and synthetic rubber has been tested in Wis., experiments are underway on two half-mile strips of rubber bituminous concrete paving.

What was probably the first formal plan initiated by an employer in the United States for pensioning employees after the age of 60, was launched in 1875.

Americans drank an average of about 17 gallons of beer and other malt brews per person in a recent year, about four quarts of hard liquor and four quarts of wine.

True Boundaries Seen in Books

LOS ANGELES — (UP) — There is a man in California who believes that the true boundaries of the southwest can be answered only by books and not maps.

He is Clark Powell, librarian on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

Powell, now compiling a bibliography of 120 novels which he feels represent the truest picture of the Southwest, believes that he can mark the area by the books he has read.

The northern boundary of the Southwest, he believes, is represented by Zane Grey's most famous western novel, "Riders of the Purple Sage," whose plot is laid in southern Utah and northern Arizona.

He locates the eastern boundary in Tom Lea's "The Wonderful Country," set in the El Paso, Tex., area.

West — "Crazy Weather," a story by Charles McNichols set in the Colorado River country below Hoover Dam.

South — "Journey of the Flame" by Fierro Blanco (penname for Walter Nordhoff), a story set in Lower California of the 1850's.
