Baruch Testifies At Market Probe

WASHINGTON (UP)—Bernard M. Baruch, the elder statesman who made his own fortune by guessing the market right, told Senate investigators Wednesday that neither he nor anyone else "knows whether stocks are too high today."

Baruch told the Senate Banking and Currency Committee that the market is not the cause of the booms and busts in the economy.

MacArthur Hits Yalta Decision

NEW YORK (UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today that "the imminent collapse of Japan" in World War II "was clearly apparent several months" before the Yalta conference.

The former commander of Allied forces in the Far East issued a formal statement of his views as a result of the publication last week of the Yalta papers.

"Had my views been requested in reference to Yalta, I would most emphatically have recommended against bringing the Soviet into the Pacific war at that late date," MacArthur said.

MacArthur said that all his reports after October, 1944, had presaged the imminent collapse of Japan and that discussion had even been held in his headquarters about the possibility that the war against Japan would end before the war in Europe.

There have been published reports that MacArthur had told Washington the invasion of Japan and the final defeat of the Japanese would cost perhaps one million lives. These reports were cited by backers of President Roosevelt as sufficient and good reason to make concessions to the Russians at Yalta.

Hongkong Sets New Airport

HONGKONG (UP)—Hongkong authorities have decided to give the British Crown Colony a brand new airport featuring a reinforced runway that juts out into the sea.

According to an official announcement, the construction of the new airport, which in reality is an expansion of the Colony's present Kai Tak airport, will represent the largest single civil engineering contract ever to be undertaken in the colony's history of more than 100 years.

While announcing the large-scale undertaking the government advertised in the Colony's newspapers for contractors to handle the huge project. The advertisement stated that the project is merely the first stage of the development of the present Kai Tak airport.

The main task in stage one will be to reclaim a strip of land adjacent to the present airport on which the new runway will be built. This, according to the government, will entail construction of about three and one-fourth miles of sea-wall and the reclamation project alone will cover some 12,000,000 cubic yards of area. Preliminary plans call for completion of stage one sometime in 1958.

That's One Way To Get Out of It

BATAVIA, N. Y. (UP)—When 19-year-old Karen Tundo failed to appear at her dentist's office for an appointment, her parents, neighbors and city police began an intensive search for her.

Four hours later she returned home, tired and bored. When asked where she had been, Karen replied she had been to the dentist. She complained that the dentist never did get around to her.

Seems that Karen had misunderstood her mother's instructions and had spent the afternoon in the wrong dentist's waiting room.

CUTS HIMSELF A SLICE OF HOUSE—The contractor who took on the job of moving this Manhattan, Kan., house to a new location found that the structure was too tall to take through the city's streets. So he made it a layer-cake operation by sawing the house into two layers for trucking away. The site was needed for a nearby bank's parking lot.

Demand-Supply Crisis Faced by Steel Industry

NEW YORK (UP)—The soaring steel industry faces a demand-supply crisis, Iron Age said today and issued this warning: "The worst is yet to come."

Back of the booming market for steel lies a general industrial upswing, noted the national metalworking weekly.

Producers are doing all they can to cope with the crisis," it said. "And consumers are fighting hard to protect their own interests."

"But signs are multiplying that the surging economy is gaining more strength. The pickup is reaching into new industries and generating additional steel demand which intensifies the competition for available finished products."

Iron Age said the demand pattern works like a chain reaction, with automotive buying serving as "the trigger."

"Continued high consumer demand for cars," it noted, "indicates a strong automotive push for steel through the first half of 1955, barring an auto strike in June."

"Automotive buying in turn exerts a strong impact on other consumers, including the car industry's suppliers."

"Aggravating the picture is a resurgence in buying for farm appliances, construction, oil and gas, and pipe line projects. Even the railroads are becoming more of a factor."

Iron Age points out that the full potential in some industries still looms ahead. It mentions the possibility of a shortage in merchant wire, reflecting heavy farm demand.

"Meanwhile," it adds, "the outlook for third-quarter business grows stronger. More consumers are trying to place third-quarter business."

"Producers now are resigned to fairly substantial carryovers from the second quarter on some products."

The publication points to these other signs of a tightening market:

1. More consumers are paying full warehouse prices for small tonnage.
2. Mills are running short of shipping space.
3. Steel brokers are receiving more inquiries for premium-priced goods.
4. "Secondary" material virtually has gone from the market, because of upgrading.
5. Growing interests in steel conversion.

Iron Age commented that "some sources may be trying to lay the groundwork for domestic conversion arrangements."

Baruch's statement for Sen. J. William Fulbright's investigating group said the market's function might be improved by a reduction in the capital gains tax. But he said he was firmly opposed to a lowering of that or any other tax "until our defenses are made secure and the budget is balanced."

He was the final witness in three weeks of opening hearings in the committee's "friendly study" of the sharp rise in stock prices in the past 18 months.
