Wheat Reseal Program Noted

Special to The Bulletin
MADRAS—Wheat offered for resale under Commodity Credit Corporation loans must meet new sanitary requirements as well as customary grade and other standards, Marion Jewel, Jefferson county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office manager, announces.

Added emphasis on objectional foreign matter in wheat comes from stricter Pure Food and Drug act requirements that will apply to wheat from 1955 on.

Wheat, if rerealed and later found not to meet all requirements, will be disposed of to the highest bidder, for livestock feed. The farmer must pay back the difference between the loan and amount received when resold.

To avoid further loss, Jewel urges farmers to inspect wheat frequently. Often simple structural repairs and quick action will halt deterioration. If new structures are planned, careful consideration should be given to loan requirements.

MADRAS — Work on Morrow well No. 1, being drilled on the Robert and Andrew Morrow ranch, near Grizzly, is progressing and a depth of 2700 feet has been reached, Jim Morris, president of Northwestern Oils, Inc., said this week.

The pump used to move circulating mud went out recently and a new one has been purchased and was expected to be in operation today. The well, at the present horizon, is producing gas-cut mud and increasing flows of gas, which Morris hopes will continue.

He anticipates striking commercial quantities of gas within the next 1000 feet.

Indian Dinner Well Attended
Special to The Bulletin
MADRAS — More than 160 persons turned out Wednesday evening for a "Meet Your Neighbor" dinner held in the recently completed dining hall on the Warm Springs Indian Reservation.

The function was first held in the hall which, with a kitchen and cottage, was constructed at a cost of $61,464.49, and finished three weeks ago.

The affair was hosted by the Warm Springs Boarding school faculty and the Indian Tribal council.

Businessmen, Jefferson county and Madras officials, and others ate the meal, which featured fresh-caught salmon and ham, and toured the new structure and other buildings of the boarding school.

Julian Smith, reservation principal, was master of ceremonies, and Charles Jackson, Tribal council chairman, introduced the council.

Judge Henry Dussault took care of Jefferson county official introductions and J. W. Elliott, superintendent of the reservation, presented the administrative staff.

Speakers included Carl Rhoda, Madras Union high school superintendent; Martin Holms, assistant area director of community services; and Don Foster, area director of the bureau of Indian affairs.

Boarding school boys performed on the trampoline and members of Boy Scout Troop No. 59 and Girl Scouts danced in tribal costumes. The program included chicken dance, skip dance, eagle dance, feast dance, hoop dance, and war dance.

Ila S. Grant's Sage Brushings

The first time I heard of Ivysharp character. He got on to the College's Todhunter Hall, I thought right away, and went along with it. That gave him an opportunity to make clever speeches to the dog, like this:

"Good morning, Mr. Minor. How wags the world with our scholar with a collar? And do you have any bones to pick with the president?"

The president got so carried away with the game that he started writing communications to the college paper, signed "F. Canis Minor." Well, it was inevitable that Mr. Minor would be named the campus "man of the month."

When the time came for presentation of the award, the trick was manipulated as a publicity stunt, and the college got more teachers and smaller classes, and everybody was happy.

That just goes to show what television can do with a shaggy tale.

The scientists at Yucca Flat, like the Portland police department, are right on top of an explosive situation.

The hard-working folks at radio station KBND really outdid themselves on the commercial for a local money-lender.

First there's a booming excerpt from the "William Tell Overture," which any youngster knows as the ringing theme song for a popular western. Then a lanky Westerner (I betcha) says "Howdy, podnar! This is your loan-

Well, boys will be boys, as the saying goes, and several of the fellers decided it would be a pretty devilish trick to enroll the college president's dog as a full-time student. They signed him up as F. Canis Minor, and divided his paper work among their number. I could explain what they were trying to prove, but you know already. Don't you?

Now this President Hall, played by Ronald Coleman, is a pretty
