

Spanish Take Dim View of U.S. Matador

By JOHN T. BLAKE
United Press Staff Correspondent
 MADRID (UP)—All Harry Whitney needs is to kill 20 or 30 more bulls. Then maybe the hard-to-please Spanish bullfight fans won't hoot him out of the building.

That's how Whitney, a lithe, baby-faced Californian, looks at his troubled career as a bullfighter. He has no intention of giving up his dream of being one of those rarities in the Spanish bullring—an American matador.

Whitney, a Korean War veteran who saw his first bullfight in Spain in 1951, made his first appearance in Madrid's Vista Alegre bullring recently. It was just short of a disaster.

He killed two bulls, but neither with a clean thrust of the sword. In one case, he had to be warned twice by officials to hurry up and dispatch the bull. In three warnings, he given a bull is taken out and shot and the matador is disgraced.

Dim View
 The critics took a dim view of the performance. "He entered the ring looking as though he had just come out of a Broadway revue," one wrote. "The boy doesn't lack courage, but he still doesn't know how to kill a brave bull with art."

Another critic noted that the 29-year-old American had been in Korea, and said "Almost certainly he will now think it is easier to fight the Chinese Communists than to pit himself against a bull without making himself look ridiculous."

Whitney had been counting on a successful showing in the Madrid ring to gain him a following among "aficionados" in Spain. It was his first meeting with three year-old bulls, and his first venture into a corrida with picadors.

Regular Sportsman
 A tall, well-proportioned fellow who played football and basketball ball back home at Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., Whitney did not serve the usual apprenticeship in Mexican bullrings before coming to this country where the bullfight was born. He got his training in small towns around Spain.

When he is not off practicing, Whitney works as manager of an American-owned restaurant that specializes in steaks and barbecued snare ribs.

Despite suggestions by Madrid bullfight experts that he retire gracefully from the ring, Whitney intends to keep plugging. There is no reason, he said, why Spaniards and Latin Americans should have such a monopoly on the "national fiesta" in Spain.

Here's an Interesting Cure For Smoking Habit -- Yoga

By HARMON W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON (UP)—The lady in the silk sari said if I would stand on my head for a few minutes and breathe real deep, she could cure me of smoking.

Indra Devi, 107 pounds and something like five feet, aged 55, is a teacher of Yoga.

"Yogi," I said. "He is a famous catcher."

"Yes," I know, said Miss Devi, who is part Swedish and part Russian. "Yogi, you spell with an 'I' at the end is the catcher. I am talking about the performance I learned in India. Yoga. About how to live longer by living right...knowing how to breathe properly, to exercise and eat the right food. Come over here and put your head on the floor."

Down on my head I went. A photographer was ready to shoot me upside down. Miss Devi flipped my legs up against the wall. Apparently her filp was not hard enough. I crumbled.

Miss Devi, who preaches in books and lectures that you can be healthy and wise if you exercise and breathe right and eat right and think right, was a little missed. I was fouling up her act. "It's easy," said Miss Devi, who was talking upside down. "It's the breathing. Put your mind to something like quitting smoking and you think better upside down. Trouble with you, Mr. N., is that you don't cooperate. You don't think hard enough."

I told the lady that I was thinking as hard as I could. But tumbled there on the floor with a hole showing in my socks, how could a man think?

Getting back to the business of quitting smoking, I asked the lady what standing on your head had to do with it. "That is just a side bar," she said. "It is mostly controlling your breathing, by taking deep gulps of air and having a will of your own."

As a matter of fact, Miss Devi said, quitting anything is easy if you are a mind to. Even foods you like or want or one for the road or, well, smoking.

Even Finances
 Miss Devi said she wanted to tell me something. She told me that by relaxation you can get over insomnia or a spell of nerves if you are worried about finances (that would be something to copyright) or almost anything, including a penchant for playing the horses.

Take insomnia, she said. Miss Devi wrote a book called "Forever Young and Forever Happy." In that she said she had helped people like Gloria Swanson, Greta Garbo, Jennifer Jones, Ruth St. Denis and others to relax and forget their problems.

If you have trouble getting to sleep, she said, the thing to do is to catalog a bunch of don'ts. Don't eat a big meal and then hit the pad. Don't go to bed before your supper has settled. Go and walk around the block. Walk four steps, then take in four big lungfuls of ozone. Walk four more steps and do the same. Go back home and sleep on a mattress with a board under it.

I tried the walk deal, went home, raked the icebox, smoked me a cigaret, had a glass of suds, hit the sack and slept like a baby.

Dinner Planned For Postmaster

Special to The Bulletin
 REDMOND—A dinner honoring retiring Redmond postmaster Arthur Tift is planned for Thursday at 7 p.m. in Redmond hotel dining room. Tift will be 70 in June and his retirement is automatically effective the end of the month. He will have completed a little over 18 years of service as Redmond postmaster. Tift says he plans to travel a bit.

Tift came to Portland in 1907 from the midwest and to Redmond in 1914. He was a bookkeeper and later helped to establish and operate a hardware store here before entering postal work.

George W. Dee, Madras postmaster is chairman for the dinner. Farley Elliott, postmaster at Bend, has been asked to act as master of ceremonies for the occasion. Attending will be Central Oregon postmasters and their wives and employees of Redmond postoffice and their wives. It is also expected that two men from the Bureau of Operations in Portland, former postoffice inspectors A. J. Tonsing and R. L. Karr, will be present. A movie is to be shown as part of the evening's entertainment.

Appointment of a postmaster to succeed Tift is pending. There are several candidates but no announcement has come from Washington, D. C.

Students Offer LaPine Program

Special to The Bulletin
 LAPINE—Students of the Northwest School of Accordion with Harvey Olson as their teacher put on an accordion show at Chemult club house Thursday evening.

It was a program of solo, duet and group playing to show the progress students made in their lessons.

Those taking part were David Gilbertson, Marion Morehouse, Carol Gordon, Lorene Anderson, Juanita Skidgel and Nancy Lechner.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Morehouse and daughter Sandra, and Mr. and Mrs. Art Skidgel and son Jack, Mr. and Mrs. Karol Gilbertson and daughter Jane, and Mrs. Pete Gordon attended the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Nelson drove to Klamath Falls and California where they will visit Mrs. Nelson's parents. Her father is in the hospital and her mother has not been too well.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reidle of Los Vanos, Calif. have arrived to spend two weeks at their cabin here.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Burkhardt of Lebanon are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gale Evans.

Miss Donna Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Carter, arrived home Thursday for a week's visit. She is employed in an insurance office in Los Angeles and has enrolled at the Ambassador college in Pasadena for the fall.

Miss Mildred Wilson, home extension agent for Deschutes county, conducted a demonstration on pressing. The meeting was held Thursday evening in the E & A building. Members of the local home extension club and 4-H members attended. One phase of pressing shown was for the boys to learn to press their own trousers.

Douglas Messenger, 4-H extension leader for the county, accompanied Miss Wilson. There were 18 present.

The coming of good weather brings out many pests. A badger has been bothering Mrs. Maud Rogers. George Martinson helped Mrs. Rogers catch the badger in a trap which was fastened to a 12' by 14-foot plank.

The badger in endeavoring to get away went in circles. It made a big hole as it circled.

Thursday evening was the last meeting of the Joy club of the Baptist church until next fall. Mrs. Edith Clark is the leader.

Old Man Raggedy

Geo. N. Taylor
 Every night there in the Skid Row Mission, Old Man Raggedy slept until the men lined up for coffee and lunch. But this night was different. Let the man from Dallas, Tex., tell it. "I outlined what God had done to free man from sinful ways. Then that man with the matted beard and rags for clothes went into a side room with me. In all my life I never heard such vile chapters as that low-down creature gave out. Then we kneeled and he opened his heart to Christ."

LATER—Who is that well-dressed business man up front? Why that is the one-time Old Man Raggedy. Now he has his business and family back and is telling them what God has done for him. SUM IT UP—"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation. Old things are passed away, behold all things have become new" 2 Cor. 5:17. This Message sponsored by a Hillsboro family.

Open House Held By Radar Unit

Special to The Bulletin
 CONDON—More than 350 visitors to the Condon Air Force station here had an opportunity on Armed Forces day, Saturday, to see part of the USAF defense radar chain in action, and to see how the Air Force provides protection for America.

The occasion was an open house program at the Condon Air Force station in observance of Armed Forces day. Visitors were taken on conducted tours to all sections of the base, including the radar towers and its operations center.

Fly-overs were provided by interceptor jets from Portland and from Larson AFB, Washington. The Condon Civil Air patrol unit simulated a message drop over the station to show the visitors how the CAP would deliver messages in times of emergency.

Radio station KRCC, Prineville, broadcast a one-hour program from the Condon base.
