Confused Readers

Local readers of the "Northwest Edition" of The Oregon Journal are a little confused after reading their copies for last Saturday.

Copies delivered by carriers in this area had a big red page one headline, two pictures and a lead story telling about Bend's Mirror Pond Pageant coming up over the weekend. Readers who got their copies by mail saw none of this material, although presumably they got the same edition.

The promotion stunt of the Portland daily makes one wonder how many Northwest communities were led to believe their local festivities were being splashed in red headlines all over the Northwest when actual distribution was in fact being confined to a small geographic area.

Plug for Driver Training

Central Oregon optometrists, at a recent district meeting, heard some interesting facts and figures on the value of driver training courses, facts and figures which lead to the conclusion that such courses could well be made compulsory in the future.

One of the members of the group reviewed a recently-published paper on the results of driver instruction, reviewing statistical results of the training over a period of nearly 20 years.

Some of the findings were:

1. Out of a group of 250 trained drivers, only two were involved in legally chargeable accidents. A similar group of non-trained drivers had nine chargeable accidents.

2. No persons were injured in the accidents reported from the trained group. Eleven persons were injured in accidents caused by members of the other group.

3. About 70 per cent of trained drivers were able to get licenses, while only 40 per cent of untrained drivers were able to pass license examinations.

4. More than four times as many untrained as trained drivers had been involved in Delaware accidents and almost five times as many untrained as trained had been arrested for traffic violations.

It all adds up to a very good report card for driver training courses.

Tribute To A Man

The end of June marked the end of public service for a great American.

The man is Herbert Hoover, former president of the United States, humanitarian, public servant and engineer.

Eight years ago he accepted appointment from former President Truman to head a commission to look into ways in eliminating waste in government. He said at the time that the job would be his last public service.

Two years ago he accepted appointment from President Eisenhower, to head another commission on reorganization of the federal government, to study policy and to examine various federal functions and agencies.

Most of the reports of the latter commission—many of them highly controversial—have been completed, and the commission itself went out of existence on June 30.

Perhaps no man in history has been reviled as was Mr. Hoover at the end of his term in office as president. He has lived, however, long enough to overcome that handicap and become again one of the most respected men in public life.

It is well that he has. Few have higher principles or standards.

A New Chancellor

On Friday last Dr. John Reese Richards became chancellor of the Oregon State System of Higher Education, chief executive officer for the state board of higher education, which has control over the eight institutions of higher learning in the state.

Dr. Richards has been in Oregon for two years, serving as assistant chancellor, and during that time has made a wide acquaintance among persons in the state interested in higher education.

He's made a good impression as a man who can get things done, both on and off the eight campuses he now heads. There's reason to believe he will make an even better impression over the years.

How to Beat Smog

Don Berry, former Los Angeles resident, has discovered how to beat smog conditions in Southern California. He moved to Bend.

Quotable Quotes

If a teacher with 35 pupils in her class earned the lowest baby-sitting rate of 25 cents per child, her annual pay would be around $10,237. Yet the average salary of the teacher in this country is around $3700 a year. — Miss W. Walker of Austin, Tex., addresses the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

I predict we will have a two-hour work day because of automation. — Albert Whitehouse, director of the United Steelworkers and vice president, National Council of Churches.

This (proposed Big Four) conference could be the world's last chance to settle differences peacefully and avoid a catastrophic war. — Vice-President Nixon.

Water Record Falls at Madras

MADRAS — Local water users topped records by using a staggering 8,763,875 gallons of water during June, Joe Palin, city recorder, said Friday after consulting records dating back to May, 1952.

Previous high was in July, 1953 when those on Madras lines used 6,742,725 gallons. The June use was 2,021,150 gallons over the previous peak.

Palin attributed the record flow to new lawns going in around Madras in anticipation of reduced water rates when the new Madras water treatment plant goes into operation this month.

Lowered rates are already in effect, as of July 1. All water over 800 cubic feet will be charged for at 10 cents per 100 cubic feet, compared with the former price of 25 cents per 100 cubic feet. Pumps have been going steadily all month taking water from the local railroad well, Palin said.

Of the amount used, 6,002,700 gallons came from the railroad well and the balance was supplied by the Deschutes Valley Water district. This means that 2,961,075 gallons were purchased from the water district for use of the city. In addition to other Madras use, 200,300 gallons went to the railroad company reservoir for their use. The recorder said that the railroad well is delivering water at capacity now, but that the D.V.W.D. can supply all additional water needed.
