COURT OR CHURCH—WHICH?

When the gavel falls and court sentence has been pronounced we have started late in reforming the juvenile delinquent. That is not to say, however, that we abandon all hope and cease to try. But the hygienic maxim, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," applies equally well to all our children.

There is, of course, no substitute for proper parental guidance. Juvenile delinquents, as a rule, do not come from families where the parents play with, teach and devote time to their children.

A church, where the whole family attends services and functions regularly, is the greatest auxiliary parents have in child guidance. For the training of the mind and heart in things not materialistic there is no institution that can replace the church. It can be a source of profound joy for the whole family—let's see you and your children in church this Sunday, and every Sunday thereafter.
