

Lumber Industry's Future Brightening, Speaker Says

GEORGE HENDERSON
Says lumber future not dark

Changes in lumber manufacture that have brightened the industry's future were reviewed here Wednesday by George M. Henderson, vice-president of the First National Bank of Portland.

He was guest speaker at the weekly meeting of the Rotary club.

Henderson pinpointed his remarks to include Deschutes county and predicted that in 20 years, at the present level of production, 100 million board feet of timber will be harvested here annually. This compares with a present production of about 53 million board feet.

Increased Payrolls

Payrolls will increase from the present $7 million dollars from lumbering in the county to $17 million, Henderson said, adding that the population should double over the same period.

Henderson's talk dealt with the future of the lumber industry in Oregon and stressed the importance of this industry to the state. About one-fourth of the entire lumber supply of the entire United States is in Oregon, he noted.

Silviculture, he said, holds the secret of the state's future lumber supply. Mention was made of sustained yielding practices and the rapidly expanding tree farm program.

New Payrolls

Because of high costs, timbermen now face the problem of utilizing every part of a tree, even the bark, Henderson mentioned. This expanded utilization of timber is providing new payrolls, he said.

Special mention was made of the hardboard industry. As a result of changing lumber practices, Oregonians will leave a timber heritage for their sons and daughters, Henderson said.

Ted Shoop presided at the luncheon session, at the Pilot Butte Inn.

KIDS IS THE CRAZIEST PEOPLE!

Kids have the goldarnest amount of energy. They play hard... learn fast... sleep soundly... grow like weeds.

How do they do it? They've got the advantage of being more recent models, of course—newer body styles and all that. But a large part of the answer lies in the fuel they run around on.

Milk's their petrol, and it's pretty hard to beat. Loaded with VCP (vitamins, calcium, protein), milk gives them mileage like you haven't gotten since you were a kid.

Funny thing about this fuel— it works fine in older models, too. Tried it recently?
