man. Mr. Eisenhower is not young. His health and vigor are matters of political dispute. It seems fair to say, however, that a man is likely to be less vigorous after than before a heart attack. Whether certain types of abdominal surgery reduce or increase a man's staying power is a question on which even the surgeons disagree.

There is considerably more doubt, as of now, about the outcome of the congressional elections than about the presidential winner. Much of Mr. Eisenhower's likely political travelling will be, as much or more in behalf of Republican congressional candidates as in support of his own candidacy.

The House tentatively approved the controversial four-point program late Friday. But a final vote on passage was delayed until Monday.

The strong House bloc of Northern Democrats and Republicans backing the bill are certain to get it passed. However, by delaying the final vote until Monday, the Dixie bloc said any possible chance of the Senate passing the bill this year in the congressional adjournment rush is gone.

Navy's New Sea-Land Assault Ship World's First Helicopter Carrier

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—The Navy re-commissioned the USS Thetis Bay, a former World War II escort carrier, Friday as a new sea-land assault weapon and believed to be the world's first helicopter carrier.

The vessel, which has undergone an $8 million reconversion job, was re-commissioned in ceremonies at the San Francisco Naval Shipyard at Hunter's Point. Rear Adm. John R. Redman, commander of the 12th Naval District and commander of the Western Sea Frontier, presided.

The Thetis Bay, displacing 10,400 tons when fully loaded and 512 feet long, was converted into what Navy and Marine experts believe is a key unit in a new concept of sea-land assault known as "vertical envelopment" or "airphibious operations." The other key unit is the helicopter.

This new theory of attack from sea upon a land-based enemy was forced upon Navy strategists following the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945. "In the few seconds of the Hiroshima bombing," said Col. Edward N. Rydchak, commander of Marine Corps Test Unit No. 1, assigned to the Thetis Bay, "all theories of amphibious assault became obsolete."

The vessel's conventional landing gear was stripped and a special elevator was installed for "choppers." Provision was made to accommodate 1200 Marines who would man the whirly birds and carry leatherneck assault troops. The first fully-trained Marine unit has been practicing for months in the hills of Camp Pendleton from the "deck" of the USS Horno, a landing strip with the same dimensions of the Thetis Bay. This Marine unit will become the prototype of others in the future, and the converted Thetis Bay will be the test model on which future helicopter assault carriers will be built from the keel up.

overcome this problem, a board of Marine Corps officers developed the theory of "vertical envelopment," which consists of landing assault troops by helicopter from a carrier behind enemy lines. The theory was tested in the Korean conflict and under simulated war conditions at Quantico, Va. In 1954, the Navy decided to bring the Thetis Bay out of mothballs and convert her to a helicopter carrier.
