Much Improved Stage Directors In Smoke-Filled Rooms at S. F.

SALEM (UP) — Mrs. Walter Toozie, wife of Supreme Court Justice Walter Toozie, reported today that her husband was in "much improved" condition at Salem Memorial hospital.
Mrs. Toozie said the ailing jurist had not required oxygen for several days. He has been under treatment for what was described as a stomach ailment.

COW PALACE, San Francisco (UP) — The smoke-filled room at this convention is inhabited by stage directors.
When the inside story of the Republican National Convention is written by some scholarly political journal (like Variety), these names will stand out like giants lowstage: George Murphy, Leroy Prinz, Robert Montgomery.
These are the men to watch. Their behind-the-scenes and right-on-scene maneuverings can make or break. Their every move is fraught.
At one crucial point in Monday night's session they held a hurried conference right on the platform. Immediately after there was a concerted swing to Ethel Merman.
One dissident group claimed 8 per cent for Dennis Morgan, but that move died a-borning. Matter of fact, Morgan was eliminated from the program altogether in the afternoon session. Let the record show that if he had sung he would have warbled "One Alone" and "Song Of The Open Road."
This is an open convention, but the way things are going, maybe it's just as well that the word "open" isn't mentioned — even in connection with a road in a song. There's a growing suspicion that there are some foregone conclusions hanging around. Miss Merman, a lady with a free-wheeling voice, is a case in point.
She wowed 'em with her "Join The Eisenhower Parade" sung to the tune of Alexander's Ragtime Band. But, again, let the record show that deep in the heart of the second chorus occurs this line:
"And on election day, we'll have our say, for Ike and Nixon!"
The exclamation point is George Murphy's. So is the Nixon. Shortly after the song was sung, Murphy said he wrote it. He didn't say when. Song writing is an open business.
Murphy's work in this convention is a thing of pulchritude. He sits on the platform, one pace to the right and three paces to the rear of the speaker, and cues the orchestra magnificently with sweeping arm waves and curtsies of the head.
In the opinion of this reviewer, and probably countless thousands of other theater goers, he hit his mark at curtain time Monday night. That was during Irene Dunn's recital of President Eisenhower's "Little Prayer Of My Own." As she began it, she dimmed her voice to a softness approaching a whisper.
On a brilliantly executed cue from Murphy, the orchestra at precisely that moment began a delicate shading of strings and woodwinds on "America The Beautiful." It was lovely. During the crucial moments, Murphy stood with hands pressed together in front of him, like a preacher at pass-the-hat time.
