Bay decision in good faith, official avers

SALEM (UPI)—Although the denial of a teaching certificate for Dean Bay, 32-year-old Weston teacher, by the Board of Education "may not meet with everyone's approval, it was made in good faith," an Oregon Education Department official said today.

James Turnbull, deputy superintendent of public instruction, said the board "was thinking primarily of what was good for the school."

Bay, an elementary teacher, was turned down for a regular teaching certificate this month after it was learned he served time on a larceny conviction in Washington state some years ago. Bay had been recommended for a regular certificate by local school officials in Weston. The state board's action has been strongly criticized.

Turnbull said that aside from the merits of the decision the board members "made it in good faith and they should not be held up to scorn."

Bay has indicated he may ask for a formal hearing before the board but Turnbull said the board has not yet received such a request. Under the administrative procedures act Bay can have such a hearing if he requests it, Turnbull said.

Bay has had two informal board hearings, which resulted in denial of the certificate, meaning he cannot teach in an Oregon public school.

Bay taught last year at Weston under a temporary certificate, since expired. The board's decision to deny was split, 4-2.

NEAHKAHNE (UPI)—A teacher fighting for his credentials in spite of a prison record won the support of Young Democrats here Sunday.

In a resolution, the Oregon Young Democrats executive board expressed "shock and disgust" at the refusal of the Oregon Board of Education to renew the certificate of Dean N. Bay of La Grande.

The board rejected Bay's application when it heard of his prior prison record on an official conviction eight years ago. Officials at the school called Bay an "outstanding" teacher and urged his return.

The Young Democrats asked the board to review Bay's case at once "on the merits of his life as he lives it today, and not as he lived it eight years ago."

"We feel that Bay has demonstrated clearly the fact of his rehabilitation by his competence as a teacher and his devotion to the profession," Dan Marsh, YD president said.

Man works 42 years for $7 a week

MIDHURST, England, (UPI)—Frank Heslop, 80, a butcher boy, got a raise today after working for 42 years for $7 a week.

"It was my fault," Heslop said. "I never asked for a raise."

Heslop got his raise—an undisclosed amount—when he went to work for a new employer after his old boss died.

The five foot, two-inch delivery boy took the job after being discharged from the British army following World War I.

Heslop's new employer, butcher Edward Knight, said: "I offered old Frank more money years ago to work for me but he was loyal and stuck to the old job."

"I see Frank is all right now. He goes around on foot—I don't think he can ride a bike like all the other butcher boys. But Frank pulls his weight and is a very useful chap."

Knight said that before the war $7 a week "was not bad pay." Heslop worked six days a week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and never once had a holiday. He said this never bothered him.

"I liked the work and meeting people. My wife, who is 84 now, worked until recently as a cook," he said. "I never asked how much money she got, and maybe she was too polite or something to tell me."

Appeal is filed on compulsory auto insurance

PORTLAND (UPI)—Oregon insurance agents announced the filing of an appeal today challenging a move to put compulsory automobile insurance on the ballot in Oregon.

An initiative petition to make auto insurance mandatory already has been obtained by state Sen. Robert Straub, D-Eugene. Straub said it also would provide lower rates for safer drivers.

If Straub obtains sufficient signatures the proposal, unless ruled invalid, would go on the ballot next year.

Merrill C. Hagan, president of the Oregon Association of Independent Insurance Agents, announced filing of the appeal today. The association, representing some 900 agents and brokers, already has stated its opposition to compulsory car insurance.

Hagan said the association was asking the Oregon Supreme Court to "clarify or rewrite" the petition. He said as it stands now, Straub's proposal would cancel Oregon's present mandatory protection against uninsured motorists, including hit-run drivers and out-of-state drivers.

"It goes far beyond imposing compulsory vehicle insurance," Hagan said, "this is precisely the point we are asking the Supreme Court to clarify."

Hagan said the Straub proposal also would affect not only cars, but nearly all types of motor vehicles in the state including many trucks and types of farm machinery.

Guard to ban over-20 signups

SALEM (UPI)—Enlistments in the Oregon Army National Guard for men 20 and over will be closed Sept. 1, the Oregon Adjutant General's office said today.

The new policy will not affect men with prior service experience. A spokesman also stressed that it doesn't affect the air national guard.

The order, by the President, did not give any reasons but a guard official here said the reason is assumed to be a move to leave those 20 and older in the selective service pool under the increased draft call.

The guard doesn't plan a stepped up recruiting effort in Oregon, the spokesman said, nor does it expect a big flood of enlistments before the 1st. The majority of recent enlistees have been over 20, he said.
