

GETS NEW SCHOLARSHIP—Leroy Hoffman receives $65 check from Mrs. H. L. Reid, scholarship chairman of the Bend Soroptimist Club. Hoffman, married, is first recipient.

Student must be married to get scholarship

Recognizing the extra determination which is often required for a married student to pursue higher education, the Bend Soroptimist Club has set up a unique requisite for its new Central Oregon College scholarship. The recipient must be a married student.

The $65 semester tuition grant has been given for the first time to Leroy Hoffman, 26-year-old sophomore. He is a forest engineering major, and plans to continue his education at Oregon State University.

Hoffman is employed part-time by the U.S. Forest Service, and has a farm background. His wife, the former Mary Foss, is employed at the Coyner Collection Agency. The Hoffmans are parents of a five-year-old daughter, Lori.

When the scholarship was offered by the Soroptimists, it was publicized in the college paper, and there were six applicants. The Soroptimist scholarship committee, headed by Mrs. H. L. Reid, reviewed the applications and made the selection.

Hoffman is an officer of the COC Circle K Club, a junior organization sponsored by the Kiwanis Club.

McCauley has been nominated for BLM board

Claude L. McCauley, Bend, ex-Deschutes County sheriff, has been nominated to serve on the newly created Bureau of Land Management State advisory board, which will hold its first meeting on February 6.

In the past, grazing advisory boards have worked with the BLM in the administration of public domain, but under a new policy, recently announced by Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall, state and national advisory boards will reflect the multiple interest concept, not grazing alone.

Advisory boards of the ten western public land states will now include representatives of groups of varied interest in the management of the national land reserves.

New amendments to the public land regulations broadened the duties and functions of the advisory boards. "The new boards will be multiple use in character and will cover many subjects and resources involved in public land administration," Russell E. Getty, state BLM director, said.

The nomination of McCauley to the state group grew out of a recent protest by Central Oregon mineral clubs to the withdrawal by the BLM of certain areas, with such action blocking rock hunting. McCauley, who retired as sheriff several years ago, is an ardent collector of semi-precious gem material.

Pearson en route to Panama meet

PORTLAND (UPI)—State Sen. Walter Pearson, a Democratic candidate for governor, was en route to the Panama Canal Zone today as an appointee of President Kennedy.

Pearson will attend a meeting of the board of directors of the Panama Canal Company. Pearson was named to the board by President Kennedy last year.

He will be gone about three weeks.

Gate crasher has big time at JFK dinner

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A gate crasher's tale of how he sat at the speaker's table and met President Kennedy at a political rally here Saturday night had the Secret Service checking on itself today.

Officials said after the incident was disclosed Tuesday they will delve into the matter.

Charles Meeks, 47, a union official, said he "just walked in" for the $100-a-plate filet mignon dinner despite security. He shook hands with the President twice, got his autograph, sat at the table near him, got his boutonniere and then had his picture taken with him.

His activities came to light when he called a local newspaper and asked for a picture of him shaking hands with Kennedy.

Meeks had not planned to crash the gate, it just turned out that way when he found no one questioning his presence. He said he went to the Fairgrounds Building where Kennedy spoke at the dinner honoring Gov. Michael V. DiSalle hoping to get a ticket from a union official, but never found him.

Meeks is president of the Greater Columbus United Auto Workers Citizenship Council.

Despite elaborate security precautions with 81 local officers and an undisclosed number of Secret Service men, nobody stopped him until he got near the door through which the presidential party was to enter. A state highway patrolman told him he would have to go out in the main hall with the other people.

4-H sessions condense work for new leaders

New 4-H leaders gained the equivalent of months of experience all within two short hours, at two meetings held recently in Bend and Redmond.

John Schmid and Janet Baker, Deschutes county extension agents in 4-H club work, said the information meetings for new 4-H club leaders were presented with the hopes of helping new leaders organize, lead, and enjoy the activities of 4-H clubs.

The "how and why" of keeping 4-H records, 4-H policies, goals for 4-H club members, and suggestions on holding the 4-Hers' interest were discussed at these informal meetings.

Plans are for similar meetings to be held within the coming months for other new 4-H leaders who organize their clubs. Four-H extension agents hope in this way to encourage parents and interested persons to become 4-H leaders, they said.

STAYS AT HIS POST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Former Rep. George McGovern said Tuesday after a meeting with President Kennedy that he will remain director of the Food for Peace Program instead of running for senator from South Dakota this year.

Son of Bishop Barton proud of his rehabilitated church

St. Barnabas Episcopal Church in the Elcelsior District of San Francisco recently celebrated its first wedding in five years.

"That possibly would not be of any great interest in Bend except for the fact that the church, fully integrated, was rehabilitated by the son of a Bend couple."

The young San Francisco vicar is The Rev. Lane W. Barton, Jr., son of Bishop and Mrs. Lane W. Barton of Bend. Bishop Barton heads the Eastern Oregon district of the Episcopal Church.

Three years ago when the Rev. Mr. Barton was named vicar of St.

Barnabas by Bishop James A. Pike it wasn't a place anyone would pick for a wedding.

The 50 year old building at 459 Vienna Street was falling apart from neglect. Ceiling boards were bulging, walls were peeling and the stained glass windows were the target of stone-throwing small fry.

There were only seven people present in the old church when the young vicar, one-time Harvard oarsman, held his first service. He accepted the challenge of the old church.

"I put on my policeman's shoes and started ringing doorbells," he said, adding: "I looked up old parishioners and found new ones."

With a hard core of 15 skilled craftsmen, the vicar, who holds a carpenter's card, set to work to restore the crumbling church.

Soon the old church took on new life. Parishioners increased steadily. They spent $10,000 of their own money on building materials and donated countless hours of volunteer work.

Recently, Archie Banks and Eliza Mae Bates walked down a plush red carpet, between rows of handmade redwood and fir pews, to a low ceilinged sanctuary whose sole ornament was a gold cross on a single exposed beam.

There, under suspended light, the young couple was married by the Rev. Mr. Barton.

The young vicar, the San Francisco Chronicle noted, is mighty proud of his renovated church, kept simple to recapture the feeling of the early church when Christians met in private homes.

But Vicar Barton of St. Barnabas is even prouder of his inte-
