The end is here upon us and could be proven. I do not want anyone to take the names of Yahweh and Yahshua to their hearts, until every soul on earth has heard these names. Then our Creator will prove His name to all in His Heavens, as He did for us. Because I did not want to do this work unless I knew it was the truth. James: 1-25. May wisdom be used in whatever we do for our Creator, to protect those He loves, and help to bring a wonderful fulfillment in all. His knowledge and love and mercy with all. Love to all, Celeste

Mission study plans reported

The First Methodist Church will begin a series of mission studies on Sunday evening, February 11. The school this year will highlight mission work in different parts of the world. Present world tensions and problems in the areas to be considered will add emphasis to the presentations.

Miss Martha Phillips will be guest speaker at the first meeting, which will be a "finger foods" potluck beginning at 6:30. Miss Phillips is presently associated with the Wycliffe Bible Translators in deputation work.

She has traveled in South and Central America; has lived with two different Indian tribes in Mexico; and has also served with the China Inland Mission in China. She comes to the school with first hand information concerning development of Christian faith and political growth in Latin American countries.

February 23, Ira Gillet, who is qualified to give a critical analysis of Africa, will be the guest speaker. His emphasis will be upon the current events and the Christian work in Africa. Those concerned about the present situation in such trouble spots as Angola, Mozambique, and Union of South Africa, will find this a challenging program.

March 4, Miss Eda Williams will give an over-view of what the Methodist Church is doing in the United States in slum areas, among the Indians, Negroes and migrant groups. A play entitled "We Call it Freedom" will be presented to show what individuals can do to help solve problems in the community and nation.

Women warn prowler they're now armed

The prowler who has been moving in the vicinity of the 1300 block of Davenport Street had better ply his trade elsewhere. Police reports show that most of the housewives in that area have armed themselves.

A woman reported last night that her dog got in a fight with the prowler who has been plaguing the area for several weeks. The dog chased him off. Said the woman, "he must be local because he knows when our husbands are away at work. He never comes around when they are at home."

She informed police that several of her neighbors had guns and would shoot if they got the chance. "We'll shoot first and ask questions later," she said.
