

Show & Shine draws autos, smiles

By Steve Tool
Wallowa County Chieftain

Thanks to good local weather, hundreds of people perused more than 100 cars at the second annual Main Street Show & Shine car show held Aug. 14-15 in Enterprise.

Wide eyes and low whistles punctuated many of the comments from admirers of classic cars with lots of chrome. At least 113 cars were registered and participated in the event, according to Doug Crow, owner/manager of Main Street Auto, which co-sponsored the show with the Elks Lodge. Crow said the event had fewer entries this year, which he attributed to the fires raging throughout the state.

"There wasn't anyone who didn't drive in here without saying they traveled through a smoke, a fire or potential road closure to get here," Crow said.

Local turnout wasn't as high as Crow expected. "That may be our fault. Last year we called a lot of local people who had a car we thought they should show off. This year we didn't do that because we thought they'd probably come back, and they didn't for one reason or another," he said.

Crow said he received positive comments from new participants and attendees alike, who said they liked the small shows better than the bigger ones because of the proximity of lodging and the downtown area. He added that he appreciated the support from participants, judges, volunteers and the community in making the show a success.

The judging staff included eight people as opposed to last year's three judges. "We worked those judges half to death; this year we split it up better," Crow said.
