OUT OF THE PAST

The contract for lateral sewers in Enterprise was awarded Wednesday afternoon by the city council to James Kennedy, a contractor with offices in Portland, Salt Lake City and Fargo, North Dakota. His bid was $18,652.60 for the 25,600 feet of laterals, and was the lowest of the seven submitted.

Construction work on Ross R. Falconer's new brick building for his feed, fuel and storage business was begun the first of the week. G. C. Holst has the contract and Enterprise brick will be used. The present product of the local brickyard is considered of as good quality as can be found in the west.

Professor W. A. Henry has begun early with the large orchestra he expects to train this season. He expects to have about twenty musicians in the organization, and will give concerts later in Enterprise and in other towns in the county. Mr. Henry has arranged to give music lessons in Joseph in a few days.

A milking machine has been installed on W. F. Craig's dairy farm just out of town. This will milk the cows much quicker than the old hand methods, thus enabling Mr. Craig to devote more time to his automobile.

Wallowa County's War Fund drive has bogged down with less than half of the quota raised after more than two weeks of campaigning and soliciting, according to C. H. Zurcher, chairman of the drive. Only $2,100 has been turned in on the county's quota of $5,200.

According to news from Hollywood, Walter Brennan's two sons, Michael and Andy, have no desire for film careers. They'll manage their pop's 12,000-acre ranch near here when they return from the service.

Plans for the construction of a new grocery store in Enterprise were announced this week by Fred Kaup of Athena. The store will be located on River street near the "Y" of Hurricane Creek highway on the property where Leonard Brooks home is located.

About 25 members of the Wallowa County Shrine Club will depart early tomorrow morning with the annual Shrine caravan. The caravan climaxes the 11th annual drive for food for the Shrine Hospital in Portland. The group will leave here with 15 pickups laden with 10 tons of food valued at approximately $3,000.

Four Enterprise graduates have been chosen to play in the marching band at Oregon State University. They are: Dan Hays, a sophomore; Steve Barber and Jim Clegg, freshmen; and Jerry White of Sweet Home, formerly of Enterprise. Sam Morgan, also a freshman at OSU, has been chosen to sing in the college choir.

One of the first local people to seek information and sign up for the new Medicare program in Wallowa County at the "sign-up day" held last Friday was Etta Gribbling of Enterprise. During the day of signing up for the program, a steady string of people showed up at the Cloverleaf hall in Enterprise to get information on the new program. At the end of a long day the program had been explained to about 60 people.

Members of the Wallowa County Junior Women's Club are gearing up for the '50s-'60s Bash Saturday at Cloverleaf Hall. Now in its third year, the event is expected to attract hundreds of participants, including musicians, lip sync artists, and dancers.

Record or near-record attendance marked the 1990 annual awards banquet of the Wallowa County Chamber of Commerce. Chamber board member Frances Crow presented the "retailer of the year" award to Bud and Ruby Zollman of Joseph, proprietors of Bud's Hardware. Dave Shriner presented the timber leader award to Howard Johnson of Wallowa. The age leader award was presented to E. H. "Van" VanBlaricom, an upper Prairie Creek rancher. Tom Swanson of Enterprise was named as the recipient of the chamber's civic leader award. The outstanding educator award was given to Gail Swart. A new award presented this year to the "Unsung Hero" by chamber president Cassie Botts went to Paul Morehead of Joseph. Botts also presented the "president's award" to her "right hand woman" Judy Wortman.

In the Chieftain's football contest, Amber Clegg was our winner this week with four misses. She tied with Jonas Skelton and Chris Uchison, and won on the point spread.

From the "For the record" column: From October 2 to October 16 there were 103 patients treated in the Wallowa Memorial Hospital's emergency room.

LODGE: Group asks for serious investors

But a local investment group, Lake Wallowa Lodge LLC, of which the Bridges are members, came up with a down-payment that took the historic lodge off the auction block for a brief window of time. They got off to a good start, raising the $250,000 down payment in 10 days. The balance, however, is a bigger number. In the next two months the newly formed LLC must come up with $2.25 million to purchase the lodge from the current owners and prevent it from falling into the hands of developers. The zoning on the land allows for significant development - something the

LLC intends to prevent. "We're working on raising our first million," said James Monteith, managing member of the LLC. "We'll announce where we are at the end of the month and we'll have prospectus available the end of this week."

In just over two months time the LLC has assembled a steering committee, an events committee, hired a professional campaign director (Heather Longhorst of Effect Your Cause.com), hired a caterer for events (Judy Goodman of Joseph), and is establishing a finance committee.

This is not an investment for knee-jerk reactionaries from any group. These are "two birds with one stone" thinkers; individuals comfortable with a holistic view. What makes this group unique is investors are both serious about their personal goals and open about the combination of ecological preservation and economic development. They expect to preserve, and to see their investment give them a return on their dollar, and do a number of other things for the benefit of the area.

"I'm interested in preserving special places in Oregon - and this is the top of the list," said investor Jay Graves of Baxton, Oregon. "But I wouldn't get into this if I thought I was losing money. I also believe that by providing the right context for the area it allows other businesses to grow."

The LLC is hosting numerous meetings and social occasions to familiarize area residents with the plans and prospectus. A well-attended Wild Harvest Dinner was held Oct. 17 and a Halloween Party, "Bats About the Lodge" is scheduled for Oct. 30. Two more events, an Almost Thanksgiving Dinner, Nov. 14 and a Winter Traditions Solstice Dinner, Dec. 19 will allow interested parties to socialize, dine on locally harvested foods, and learn more about the chance to own part of a legend.

For more information or to order tickets to any event visit lakewallowalodge.com. To inquire about investing or volunteer to assist in fundraising, call James Monteith at 541-432-3044.
