“This is our second year of fundraising. Our next step is to expand into the planning stage.”

Commentators for “The Great Escape” were Ted Hays and Jon Rombach, playing the part of two radio announcers who interrupted the broadcast of a fashion show to give a blow-by-blow account of the character escape.

Lyn Craig wrote the clever radio play, which was salted with plenty of hilarious ad-libbing on the part of the announcers.

The audience got in on the fun by guessing the characters and the books from which they escaped.

Special performances included the introduction of the story featuring Chief Joseph Days Court dressed in costumes from the ‘50s, ‘60s and ‘80s; Ted Hays as Jiminy Cricket singing “When You Wish Upon a Star” to Mary Thiel as Pinocchio; and Gail Swart as accompaniment on the piano. Joseph Postmaster Deny Kolb and his band Good Question also performed “Mailman, Bring Me No More Blues” as Jean Falbo clutched a letter full of bad news.

Bart Budwig and the Wallowa Valley Music Alliance provided the sound system and Carol Vencil the sound effects.

“It’s not dire; I didn’t get that fatal diagnosis or anything,” he said with a laugh.

Citing the time commitment, DeBoie said the six months leading to November’s election and the four years that follow were too big a commitment.

“With my business and personal life, I just can’t see my way clear to doing it the way it should be done,” he said.

DeBoie said he still plans to maintain community involvement and already has volunteered his time toward several community-based projects.

“I’m still interested in the success of Wallowa County, and if there’s some role I can play that’s not as encompassing as the role of commissioner, I’ll consider doing it,” DeBoie said.
