Wallowa Cleanup Day this Saturday

Wallowa County Chieftain

Although changes are afoot, the city of Wallowa's 3rd annual Cleanup Day will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, July 16.

No hazardous waste will be accepted this year, but for the first time vehicle tires without rims can to dropped off at the pick-up site on N. Pine Street (near Kevin's Tire Shop) for recycling.

Individuals can unload up to four tires for free, then pay $1 each for every tire above that number.

As always, no household garbage will be accepted, but privately owned horse trailers will be available to haul away wood, yard debris and electronics such as televisions and computers. There will be a garbage bin near the high school football practice field for heavy, metal items.

Other than multiple tires, no charges will be involved.

The Wallowa County Solid Waste Department has agreed to take in all refuse collected during Wallowa's Cleanup Day without charge at its Ant Flat dump site outside of Enterprise.

Les Schwab Tires in Enterprise is waving any potential tire collection fees as a goodwill gesture to the city of Wallowa.

Anticipated volunteers to help shoulder the work load include members of the Wallowa High School football team, members of the Wallowa Chapter of FFA, Wallowa County Corrections Crew and others.

The words of the OACP mirrored those expressed by Enterprise Police Chief Joel Fish, who published a statement on the newly launched Enterprise Police Department Facebook page in response to the many negative posts seen online. In his statement, Fish pledged to "focus on improving our community, not tearing it down."

We will continue to work on those things that need adjustment," Fish wrote. "We will seek answers to our problems trying to identify the root causes. We will endeavor to provide a community of peace and safety for all who live, play, work, or visit here.'

Fish, well-known for his 'positive problem solving" both here and in his former job, reminded residents that

Jorge may be down, but don't count him out. We can hope for a grudge match next year.

Other competitors included the originator of the event, Ron Osterloh, now of La Grande, in his new ride — a Harley Davis sidecar with bicycle innards. The Osterloh camera car is history, it seems.

"It's mostly cardboard," Osterloh explained. "It got rained on and looks like it went to the dentist and had Novocaine on both sides."

The new Osterloh ride, although not fast enough to beat the Flash car, may get faster as Osterloh continues to tinker on it to make it a Star Wars X-wing in time for the La Grande races.

The Steve Arment-designed Carrotmobile, driven by event organizer Michael Berry of Wild Carrot Herbals, also lost out this year, even in the grudge match against Flash. Berry says he will "search his soul" for the next use of the Carrot, but it is most likely retired as a race car.

Meanwhile in the much anticipated youth race, Nathan (Lamb) Eaves, 9, managed to beat the speedy OK Theatre car, driven this year by Isabella Brann. Eaves took the Speedster Award in a car built in the best Bowlby Bash tradition with grandfather Terry Lamb, who helped him build a faster car this year.

'It was awesome," Eaves said. "Better than last year because I won the first round (against Public Works)."

And speaking of the mayor's car, that wind-catching design on Lear's Public Works car is an invitation — nay, a gimme — and yet no other mayor, either in the county or out, has had the courage to challenge it.

Where is Lostine Mayor Krag Norton? If anybody could build a fast racer ... But no, it takes more than talent to field a car, it takes moxie. So the Mayor's Award stayed at home — where it belongs. David Carpenter of Enterprise did not disappoint, again winning People's Choice for his whimsical entry and adding a second award — Most Creative — to his collection.

"I'd like to get David down to La Grande, because they think they're hotshots," Osterloh said. "They need to see Wallowa County creativity."

Two grudge matches followed the championship race.

Michael Berry challenged Nathan Curtis to "take the slow lane this time" and they battled it out in a sheer speed race after swapping lanes. The lane change made the race closer all right, but Curtis and Flash still took the win.

Next, Osterloh and Carpenter went head to head in a show-stopper of wobbling sails and last-minute surges. Carpenter's antics distracted the driver of the faster car, but Osterloh took his eyes off the amazing show Carpenter was putting on long enough to shoot across the finish first in
