OBITUARIES

Scott Colony
June 11, 1952 — Dec. 17, 2016

Scott Edward Colony was born in Cedar Rapids Iowa, June 11, 1952 to Dorothy and Charles Colony. He grew up in Albany, Oregon, graduating from West Albany High School in 1970. He attended both U of O and OSU, graduating with a degree in Business Administration. Scott and his first wife, Kathleen, raised three children: John, Abram and Connie. During these years, he managed the Arrowhead truck stop in Pendleton for 10 years, traveled in sales, and was the branch manager at U.S. Bank in Corvallis.

Scott moved to Wallowa County in January 2001 after marrying his high school friend, June Davis. He worked at various jobs: the Joseph mill, fence building, weed control and as a car salesman. He finally found his calling when hired to work for the Center for Wellness, first as the administrator for the Wallowa River House, and a few years later as their "person of all skills" employee. Plumbing, electrical, roofing, fixing engines, assembling furniture, painting buildings; these were the practical things he excelled in. However, if a client needed meds, a friend or an ability to cook their own meals, Scott was ready to help. He was about to start his first year as a full-time case worker when he went on his last hunt up Bear Creek on Dec. 17. Hunting was in his DNA. His father brought him to the Wenaha country to hunt when he was just a boy, and he could weave in and out of the forests in pursuit of his game with a natural grace and skill. He said that he had never been "lost" while hunting, just "misplaced" for a while.

Scott also had a passion for firewood. Mostly he liked to be in the woods, and firewood was his other excuse to go out and be in God's beautiful creation. He had a knack for finding that elusive dead tamarack in thickets others had missed. He made sure that June never had to go further than her back porch to get stove wood.

Scott's greatest asset was his huge capacity to love. It fueled his unending kindness, his willingness to see beyond any human frailty of mental illness, or inability to function in society. Scott loved and supported someone exactly where they were.

As the Presbyterian church elder, the sidewalks were always shoveled, the lawns mowed, bells rang, programs passed the communion shared. All done with quiet attention. As the Master of the South Fork Grange, he was steady in his leadership and passionate about his membership in this national organization. He attended the national conference in 2016, and also participated in State Grange functions as their Region 6 Legislative Committee representative.

Scott was preceded in death by his mother, father, and sister; Cynthia Miles. Survivors include brother Paul Colony, sister Lynn Huber and wife June Colony.

Memorial services will be held on Saturday, Jan. 28 at the Liberty Grange Hall. Doors open at 10:30 a.m. with the service at 11:00 and a potluck to follow. Lostine Presbyterian pastor Stephen Kliewer officiating. All who knew Scott and June are invited to come, share stories and celebrate his life. Contributions to Wallowa County Search and Rescue and the South Fork Grange #605 can be made in memory of Scott.
