RACE

No pets are allowed at the potluck or in the race area.

Despite having no history of dog mushing in the area, Nave said the Eagle Cap Extreme has become part of the fabric of Wallowa County. It is one of only two sled dog races in the lower 48 states that serve as a qualifier for the Iditarod and Yukon Quest, the two largest mushing events in the world.

"It's kind of amazing that something like this is right here in our backvard, off the beaten path," Nave said.

Dogs and mushers will have their work cut out for them. The 200-mile course features 26,000 feet of elevation

Brett Bruggeman, of Great Falls, Mont., has won the 200mile race the last two years, and returns again in 2017. In 2015, he finished the course in 30 hours and three minutes.

"He's phenomenal," Nave said. "He'll be the guy to catch, yet again."

A total of eight mushers will compete in the 200-mile race, eight in the 100-mile race and seven in the pot race — including locals Morgan Anderson, of Enterprise, and Susan Parraga, of Joseph. Parraga was the first Eagle Cap Extreme, while Anderson previously competed in the junior race.

There is only one contestant in this year's junior race, 15-year-old Christina Gibson of Riverside, Wash. Nave said interest in the Eagle Cap Extreme grows every year, and its reputation continues to build. "Our purse isn't as big as some of the other races, but (mushers) are drawn back by the community support and the route," Nave said. "We're going over some of the most scenic terrain anywhere."

Conditions should be in great shape for this year's races, with approximately two to three feet of snow over the course, including two feet of off three days of racing, starting at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 21, back at the Joseph Community Center. Tickets are $20 for the general public, including dinner and entertainment. There will also be live and silent auction fundraisers to benefit the nonprofit Eagle Cap Extreme.

Nave said the event is a labor of love for directors, volunteers and the entire community.

"We have a lot of support," he said. "It's a privilege to be around these canine athletes."

This week's athlete of the week is Joseph Charter School junior Rylie Warnock for his performance at the Jo-Hi Invite wrestling meet on Jan.

The 17-year-old wrestled his way to the championship match in the 182 lbs. bracket with Elgin wrestler Donnovan Tate. Warnock had never beaten Tate in previous contests.

After suffering a severe bloody nose and spending the first round barely escaping getting pinned, Warnock found himself down 8-1. Rather than giving up, Warnock turned up the heat and although succumbing in a 10-6 decision, thoroughly controlled the rest of the
