A giant water bug (family Belostomatidae) peers out of Jamie Sweers hat, Friday, April 2, 2021. Sweers, about 5 years old, captured the 3-inch-long predator near a ditch adjacent to the Wallowa football field. According to the National Park Service, giant water bugs live in freshwater ponds, marshes and slow-moving pools in streams worldwide. They prey on a surprising variety of aquatic life, including tadpoles, small fish, insects and other arthropods.
