

SCORES HEAR ROTARY CLUB SPEAKER HERE

No man, unless his heart beats true; or no woman or child with the emotions that govern human existence, left the assembly last night ashamed because he or she was an American. What true Americanism means to America, and what the balm for the greatest disease of all ages—industrial unrest—was the keynote of the stirring, forceful address delivered there as the rain fell in sheets across Company M's headquarters, before 1200 Salemites by E. F. Fish, American from whose hands the "grease of toil" has not yet ebbed.

No larger audience ever has come forth in this city for a similar occasion. And no one ever left the assembly before any speaker here more encouraged to be loyal to old Uncle Sam.

Mr. Fish's speech, which sounded the death knell to all radicalism, bolshevism and disloyalty within the Union's borders, and offered the only solution to bring about harmony in the realm of the working class, follows in part:

Talks Americanism
"I do not come here the official representative of organized labor. I do not come here the official representative of any employer; I am not under the payment of any organization. I would rather take the money of a clean business man, or any other right thinking person, to build up American citizenship; than to take the dirty, lowly dollars of Lenin and Trotsky to tear it down. The money I receive I prize highly because it indicates the appreciation of the work I am doing."

"We—a Swede and myself—are preaching the doctrine of American citizenship, and striving wherever we go to produce 100 per cent Americanism in every man and woman's heart. I am a member of the United States of America—a citizen, people of the greatest country in the world. I have no superior type of American to advocate. I am humbled to the dust when I meet the man back from France, who, with Americanism in his heart—no other aim—gave all he had that we might live in harmony and peace here."

"When I think tonight of the men, many thousands of them, who lie beneath the poppy filled fields of Flanders, I feel more and more that I represent the commonest type of American citizenship."

Cure of Unrest
"For the privilege to talk as an American citizen I have not had to ask for the right to speak, because it is my God given blood gotten, constitutional right. They say—these agitators do—that there is no more free speech in America. I am having the time of my life exercising my lungs. Why? Because, wherever I go, they say no longer as you preach Americanism we stand by you to the end. "My topic tonight is the cause and cure of industrial unrest. The cause of industrial unrest, the cause of disloyalty, the cause of disruption, is not so intricate, so complicated a problem as to require any great length of time."

"We have had a period of great wage increases. We have had a period wherein working conditions are steadily increasing to the better. We have had a period in which organized labor has found itself in position where it commands greater prestige ever known before in the history of its struggle for power in the United States. And we have had the pleasure of meeting on the platforms of conciliation and arbitration—our employers."

Highest Wages Known
"We must not forget, that though our wages have increased prices too, are soaring in the sky. And yet we are receiving today—all things considered—the highest wages ever paid in the history of American labor."

"The eight hour day has come as an accepted fact. In spite of these things the country is swelling with agitation and unrest. As our demands were met, we were assured that conditions would quiet. But, to the contrary, as our demands were met unrest increased until the problem has come to affect not only organized labor and the employer, but the citizen and statesman."

"This raises the point of accurate diagnosis of the problem. American laborers are not fools. They are not disloyal to the United States of America. (Applause). Everywhere I go I have challenged any one to say that the worker is disloyal to the flag."

"We are not going to overlook the fact that organized labor, and labor has apparently demanded things that industry could not give, without facing bankruptcy. Neither will we overlook the fact that some factions of labor have fostered radical doctrines. The voice speaking today for American labor is not the voice of American labor. The man who casts slurs at that flag hanging on yonder wall, in the guise that it is for American labor, is a hypocrite, an usurper. He is not the spokesman for American labor; and it will be only a little while when we will find that the conservative element in our labor circles will rise and assert itself and say 'we have had enough.' The speaker who talks for American labor must talk American at the same time he speaks for labor."

"It is great folly to assume that all radicals and bolsheviks are in the ranks of so called labor. Oh, no, there are some in palaces so great, eating from plates of gold. Some employers and some business men are just as dangerous to the institutions of America as the laborers are. I have no more respect for the business man or employer who wraps himself in the folds of our old glory to shield their own interests than I have for the memory of Benedict Arnold."

Voice of Foreign Tongues
"The voice that is speaking for labor today is not the voice of labor. No, dear people, it is the voice of foreign tongues. And let's get at it."

"Not every man who makes a protest against labor conditions, or who has a grievance, is an I. W. O. or a bolshevik. But every man, or son of man, who speaks in the voice of labor anarchy or radicalism should be defeated and taught to know that America will not allow its flag to lay at the feet of any alien agitator."

Here Mr. Fish read from an editorial clipped from a leading labor journal. It compared the constitution of the United States as inferior to the charter of the soviet government in Russia.

"When I read this," he resumed, sending each statement with vigorous gestures into the ears of his listeners, "I said to myself that it is time for the American laboring man to take the platform; because the true American laboring man will not stand for that kind of rot."

French Class Hatred
"For years soap box orators, radical newspapers and editorial writers have carried on an energetic campaign teaching class hatred and disrespect to the institutions of America. Not all agitators are confined to logging camps. Once in a college class a professor sought to sow seeds of disrespect for the United States in my heart. I tell you you have had a crop of high men in these institutions slowly but steadily sowing the seeds of unrest and disloyalty among your children. When you put your hand across the mouth of the labor agitator, put it also across the mouths of the professors in our colleges. Let us see to it that every man and woman entrusted with a voice in educating America's young be 100 per cent in his desire to teach loyalty and respect to the constitution of the United States."

"The laboring man knows that the bullet of the assassin and the blood stained knife of the murderer will never win for them their desires. But they know that they crush forever their chances of winning into the dirt beneath their feet. Bolshevism, at maturity, knows no language but the language of force."

Activity of Agitators
The speaker then cited the activities of agitators in spreading propaganda in the United States during the war against answering the call of conscription, and protesting that the war was one of capitalists."

"Surely we need no other argument," he thundered, "to make us rise in wrath and crowd the doctrines of radicals down the throats of the people who are trying to down the standards of this country."

"Bolsheviks—if there are any of you here tonight—you are my friend" and Fish's voice rang with irony. "And at heart, you have my sympathy. If any of you don't like our ways here—our free press and free speech—pack up your things in your little red bandana and go back to the country from whence you came as fast as God will let you. I love you, and advise you, just quietly, to get out. Go as soon as you can go. For if you don't you

Justice Department Puts "Red" Bills Up To Senate

Washington, Nov. 19.—Drastic measures for the suppression of "reds" in the United States were submitted to the senate today by the department of justice in a bill introduced by Senator Nelson, chairman of the senate judiciary committee.

The bill defines seditious persons as those who "advocate, oppose, prevent, hinder, delay or seek to do any of these things against the free performance of the government or one of its officers."

Mental Work Needs A Stomach

Great Mistake to Imagine You Can Work Better and Faster on the Starvation Plan. Eat What You Like But Follow With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Mental work uses up energy fast. And energy comes from food. To eat little or nothing in order to do more work is a fallacy that has created an army of dyspeptics. A better plan is to eat the regular portions of food such as make up the average meal and follow each meal with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

You will then get a double benefit—energy from food and sociability with meals, for as a rule, the light eater, or those who skip meals, get into a bad habit, a rut, of hermit-like isolation. Do not be afraid of gasiness, sour stomach, heartburn, heavy feeling or coated tongue after meals. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets arouse the stomach to secrete the juices necessary to relieve these troubles that so frequently distress the mental worker. They contain harmless ingredients which act with an alkaline effect, so you may eat the rich things of the banquet or the savory sausage for breakfast with utmost freedom.

Get a 50-cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store, eat freely of what you like and you will do more and better work than on a skimpy diet. Try his plan. m idtest e-han
