Rippling Rhymes.

CHANGE OF HEART.
 I used to hate the horrid Hun, and longed to slay him with a gun; but now that war has had its day, my hatreds seem to melt away; I find it hard to grind my teeth, and stamp upon my laurel wreath, and call down curses on a foe, when such a great I do shake who'd make it worth my while not to know. I cannot think of any to hate. 'Tis true some chaps have wrought me ill; they handed me a bitter pill; but I forget them and their deeds, and spend my evenings stringing beads, and thinking of the boys I've known who never caused me grief or groan. And there are men who hate me well, and of their enmity they tell, and say that on some day remote they'll happily bear away my foot. My neighbors tell me of their words, and still I wobble sublime, and have the blindest kind of time. They'll all get tired of hating me, when my indifference they see; whereas, if I indulged in sweats, and handed back their foolish threats, the air would soon be full of fuc, and teeth and whiskers, as it were. And hatred is the thing I hate; no man can keep his dome on straight, and be accounted fully sane, if he has hatred in his brain.

Odds and Ends

Portland, Or.—Because a negro Pullman porter stole a kiss from Mrs. Fannie Hazelhurst is suing Walker D. Hines, as director general of railroads, for $10,000 damages.

Los Angeles—James Gordon walked North Berry over the head with a bottle, cutting his head wide open. Gordon grabbed the bottle instead of a rubber one during the filming of the "Sea Wolf."

St. Paul, Minn.—A mongrel of the streets wandered into police court and almost saved N. Tankenhorst from prosecution on a charge of illegal selling of fish by eating the evidence.

Cleveland, O.—The hunting season opened auspiciously here. Only two persons were shot on the first day.

San Francisco—Patrolman Small granted a woman prisoner's request to step into a store. He waited outside—and waited. "Gosh, I don't think she's coming back," he decided finally. She didn't.

San Francisco—Eighteen year-old Eleanor Babroff obtained a license last week to marry a farmer. Yesterday she decided he was "too slow" and got another license to wed a ship's yard worker.

Grain Corporation To Put Pure White Flour On Sale

New York, Nov. 20.—The United States Grain corporation has announced it will soon offer to the public "pure straight" flour, made from the finest wheat in 2 1/2 and 12 1/2 pound packages at "prices which will reflect the grain corporation buying price of the flour."
 The flour will be available in about three weeks in larger cities, the statement said. It is expected the retail price will be about 75 cents for 12 1/2 pound sack.

PEACE REJECTED.

TRUE to form, the United States senate, placing pretended partisan political advantage above human welfare, has rejected the peace treaty, already accepted by our allies, refused cooperation in reconstruction and re-establishment of peace and adjourned after failing to function on international or national legislation—a record of failure unparalleled.

Since called into special session last spring, the senate has deluged the country with oratory and invective, but failed to pass a single constructive measure. The republicans were in control but were interested only in playing cheap politics and failed to rise to the greatness of the opportunity. The following national problems remain unsolved:

- Return of railroads;
- Reorganization of army on peace basis;
- Repeal of war time luxury taxes;
- Establishment of a merchant marine policy;
- Opening of public lands for soldier's settlement;
- Development of water power sites on public lands;
- Opening up of oil, coal and phosphate lands;
- Government control of meat packing industry;
- Revision of court-martial system.

The Lodge reservations would have nullified the treaty—which was their only object. Their adoption would have compelled the rejection of the treaty by the president—and have virtually withdrawn America from participation in the League of Nations.

The intent of the reactionary senate leaders from the outset has been inimical to the treaty because it was drafted by the president—and the president happened to belong to the opposite political party. In this they were assisted by the pro-Huns, whose object has been to aid Germany and make an alliance with her against our allies.

The reservation to Article X. attempts to transfer the executive authority to the legislative branch of government. The conduct of foreign relations is entrusted by the constitution to the president, and the senate attempted by a treaty reservation to usurp this vested authority. The reservation also declares that congress alone can authorize the employment of the military and naval forces of the United States, which is not true. Congress alone can create and maintain the armed forces, but the president is commander in chief. He alone can declare war.

The reservations insulted our allies and sneered at the liberties of small nations created by the war. They attempted to amend the constitution to slap the president. Surely no great issue was ever met in so small a fashion and no party leader has ever failed so miserably as Henry Cabot Lodge.

The nation which aroused the hopes of the world and secured its trust and confidence by its exalted ideals during the war and at the peace conference, has mired in the dismal swamp of reaction, deserting allies, betraying friends, blasting the faith of humanity.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE
 by the noted author
Idah McGlone Gibson

JOHN PLAYS GOOD FAIRY

Naturally I was much depressed, but when I arrived in my room I found my telephone ringing and John's voice came over the wire with the same accents which had so often thrilled me before our wedding.
 "Get on your glad rags, honey, and ask the chauffeur to bring you down. Alice and Bessie and Alice's husband and myself and Karl Shepard, if we can get hold of him are going out to the golf club."
 This particularly cheered me as I knew that I was quite proficient at golf and I was sure that John did not know it. We had been too busy with our love-making to pay attention to anything but a twosome in his rooster or a secluded corner of the veranda.
 My trunk had come and I had an immaculate white silk sport suit which I had never worn. I dressed myself with great care.
 "You certainly look better than you did last night," I said, smiling at my mirrored likeness.
 From my white duvety sports hat with its stunning white plumes to my low heeled white buck sport shoes, I felt I was not only appropriately but perfectly dressed. With a feeling of triumph I noticed that my "great brown eyes," as John called them, shone brilliantly. Laughingly I said to the girl in the full length mirror: "I am not sure whether happiness or anger is the best cosmetics," for my cheeks were so pink that I only needed a tiny bit of rouge upon my lips to complete the assurance that never in my life had I looked better.

A little of this was caused, perhaps, because of the surprise I knew was in store for John. He never had asked me and I had never told him that I was an enthusiastic sportswoman and had been in many tennis and golf tournaments. The previous winter at Coronado I had made one of the women's polo teams. And on still another occasion I had won a loving cup in the woman's amateur swimming race at Coronado.

"Will you please tell the chauffeur that I want him to drive me to Mr. Gordon's office? And so, Emmeline, if Madame Gordon asks, tell her that I shall not be back to luncheon."
 An imperative ring took Emmeline to Madame Gordon's room before she had a chance to give orders to the chauffeur, but she came back almost at once with the information that it would be impossible for me to have the car as Madame Gordon was dressing to go out herself.
 I made no reply to this except to ask Emmeline to get my husband on the wire.
 "I'll get him for you, Mrs. Gordon," she said quickly. Her alacrity gave me a little inward smile as I foresaw that it was very probable that Emmeline's sympathies would be with me although her interests might be with Madame Gordon.

I took the receiver from Emmeline and in reply to John's voice I merely repeated his mother's message in the most matter-of-fact tones, and I could not help a little feeling of triumph when I heard John swear.
 "What time is it?" I heard him ask of someone near him. "You have plenty of time, my dear, to wait for your own car. I will bring it myself."
 "John, John, what do you mean?"
 "You'll see, dearest—I'm not going to have my wife play second fiddle."

CITY TO CELEBRATE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS IN GEORGIOUS STYLE

Salem, during the Christmas holidays, will don the most gorgeous garb that ever draped its graceful lines. On every down town street, in every shop window, and plaza blocks tokens of the happy Yuletide will loudly bespeak the joyous spirit that will reign in the capital city.

One of the most extensive programs of decoration ever shaped for the city has been outlined, and was adopted at the meeting last night in the Commercial club of the Business Men's League.
 It is planned to cloak every lamp post on the downtown streets in the green splendor of the native cedar; house bells, made of scented evergreens and with a tapper illumination of beautiful lights will hang from cedar-entwined arches at the intersection of the principal streets in the business district.

Each shop window will form the frontpiece for beautiful, uniformed wreaths. And many of the merchants responding to the call of the season, will make elaborate decorations in their display windows.
 And the Salem Cherrians are active in executing the decoration and celebrative scheme. They have arranged to erect a community Christmas tree down town where all the kiddies—and old folks, too—may dance and frolic during the festive occasion.

COMING PRODUCTION OLD BUT STILL GOOD

"In Old Kentucky" which will be given at the Grand opera house Thursday, November 20, has entertained more playgoers throughout the United States and Canada than any drama now current, and it remains today one of the most wholesome and interesting and one of the most absorbing and thrilling of all the stage offerings of the day. It is worth one's time to sit through a performance of this delightful drama. There are scenes of realism that leave a strong impression on the mind and much genuine sparkling humor, breezy and wholesome. The love story unfolded in the play is an ideal one and charms with its simple purity and truth. There is a lovable mountain lass who does heroic things in a natural manner and there is a manly young hero of the right sort. Miss Blye Power in the leading role of the brave mountain girl, gives a splendid portrayal of this trying part. A fine company and a pretentious band of Ethiopian plantation artists help to liven up the performance.
 The first town in Unadilla county to report 1919 city tax levy is Echo, which will raise an even $3000 for expenses of government.

COAL OPERATORS AND MINERS NOT YET NEAR AGREEMENT, BELIEF

By Ralph F. Couch
 (United Press staff correspondent)
 Washington, Nov. 20.—Coal operators and miners seemed far from agreement here today as the nation began to feel the fuel shortage.

As members of the wage scale committee prepared to go into executive session on this, the sixth day of their conference, reports reached government sources of the closing of plants in the middle west for lack of fuel.
 In the south, domestic consumers are on a basis of one ton to a household, dictated by the regional rationing committee of the railroad administration. Despite optimistic views of the officials of the labor department that differences would be settled within a few days, few of the 400,000 miners who struck November 1 have gone back to work.
 Operators in conference here are delaying negotiations on the question of a wage scale, it was learned today and are insisting that John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, make a new attempt to get the men back to the mines.

CALL FOR BRIDGE BIDS ISSUED BY COMMISSION

At a meeting of the state highway commission in Portland, December 20, bids will be opened for the construction of the huge bascule bridge which is to span Young's bay at Astoria. Two plans have been prepared by the bridge department of the commission for this bridge. One of the contemplated combination highway and railroad bridges estimated cost is approximately $300,000. The other plan contemplates only a highway bridge at an estimated cost of $250,000. Under the former plan the bridge would be shared by the Astoria belt line railway and half the cost of the structure would be paid by the port of Astoria, the other half to be distributed between the county, state and federal governments. The bridge will be one of the largest structures of its kind in the Northwest with a central span 1,800 feet in the clear. This span will be of structural steel and will rest on reinforced concrete piers.
 Another $1,000,000 worth of state highway bonds, the fifth issue of the size to be offered under the recently authorized $10,000,000 highway bonds, will be offered for sale at the December session of the commission.

Could Not Eat or Sleep

Vinol, our Cod Liver and Iron Tonic, gave him appetite and felt like different man.

Ruston, La.—"I am a working man and got all run down so I could not eat, sleep or work. Vinol was recommended for my condition. It built me up so I eat well, sleep well, can work all day long and not feel tired. In fact, I feel like a different man since I took it."
 JOHN H. WILSON.

"Men fret and worry." That's why they overwork, get nervous, all run down, have no appetite, and can "hardly drag around." Vinol creates a hearty appetite, induces sound sleep, invigorates the nerves, creates strength and quiets the nerves.
 It is the beef and cod liver peptones contained in Vinol aided by iron and glycerophosphates which makes it such a famous blood maker, nerve builder and strength creator.
