INDIAN SUMMER

Bliss is Indian who invented rainy days which bear his name, days which we are all contented with the old world's changing name.

Odds and Ends

Venice, Cal.—The supreme court having declared prohibition constitutional, Mayor Kinney of Venice has wired this plea to Senators Johnson and Phelan: "For the love of Mike take a chance at peace."

Los Angeles, Cal.—Prohibition is sweeping in. It looked like the Pacific ocean was going dry yesterday when the tide at Los Angeles harbor, according to fishermen was the lowest in a decade.

New York — Professor Elgenner, who claims to be able to talk with monkeys, is suing a commercial photography company because he alleges it circulated a picture of him being kissed by a monkey.

Kokomo, Ind.—W. W. Wolverton advertised "No questions asked" for the return of some eggs stolen from his hen house. The thief dropped his purse containing much more than enough money to pay for the eggs.

Sioux City, Iowa.—Mrs. U. S. Grant obtained a license to wed here yesterday. Mrs. Grant is a Winnebago Indian, aged 75 years, and is marrying Harry Rayve, 22 years old, also of the Winnebago tribe.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO FORCE TREATY FAILS

Washington, Dec. 13.—For the second time within a week, Senator Knox, Pennsylvania, today made an unsuccessful attempt to get the senate to consider his resolution of ratification of the peace treaty without the league of nations covenant.

Senator McKelvey, Tennessee, democrat, objected and Knox then offered his resolution for a separate peace with Germany. To this Senator Nelson, Minnesota, republican, and McKellar both objected, and Knox began a speech in support of a motion to refer the first resolution to the foreign relations committee.

STORM WRECKS 44 VESSELS. St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 13.—Thirteen schooners and one steamer are total wrecks as the result of the terrific storms which swept the North Atlantic last week, according to information received today over lines of communication that are being slowly restored.

A LOSS TO OREGON.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the summary dismissal of State Biologist Will L. Finley from office by the state fish and game commission comes as a shock to lovers of Oregon wild life and will be keenly regretted by sportsmen and the general public.

Mr. Finley is a naturalist of note. He has devoted the major portion of his life to the study of native birds, fish and animals of the state. His work has won national recognition and he is an acknowledged authority throughout the nation.

Called on by Governor West nine years ago to reorganize game protection and propagation work upon a scientific basis, he has devoted the years since to the work. With the reorganization of the commission under the late Governor Withycombe he was removed as state warden and the position of state biologist created for him, since which he has filmed the wild life of the state and by his lectures inculcated the love of birds and animals in school children, as well as advertised Oregon's out-of-doors resources abroad.

Mr. Finley's work has done more to foster the spirit of true conservation by influencing the rising generation than any single re-... commission's labors. All over the state, children put up bird houses and feed the birds where they formerly killed them. Adults have been shown the relation of birds to agriculture and as a result bird life is on the increase, and the principles of true sportsmanship better comprehended.

Whatever the merits of the commission's action, and there are of course two sides to every controversy, the loss of Mr. Finley's services as biologist is a loss to Oregon, rather than to himself, for had he not loved Oregon and his work, the comparatively meager compensation paid him, would not have held one of his attainments in so narrow a sphere of action and he will now be free to work out his destiny for a brilliant future in the wider field of the nation.

AN OREGON FAVORITE SON.

WHILE the republicans are busy with a dozen favorite sons in the field as candidates and a paid professional politician as general manager to raise a slush fund, now comes John Wuchter, who in a printed letter, dated at Portland, solves the problems of the democrats by nominating himself for president.

We don't know who or what John Wuchter is, save that he has applied for a copyright upon himself—and he needs it badly, lest some statesman steal his thunder. His announcement letter, to be sure, is somewhat incoherent, somewhat ungrammatical, and his spelling delightfully original, yet his knowledge of history and his ready relief from national ills qualify for membership in that illustrious band of barn-storming senators who are holding up the peace of the world for partisan advantage.

Mr. Wuchter starts in with the tax on tea and ends up with the peace conference. He summarizes with Lodgerized lucidity the situation as follows:

The Kaiser was born to rule in the name of the German people and he lost his rule. The peace conference created a farce, trying to establish a World's power of autocracy. Wilson has been no credit to the legal verb of the situation. I am in favor of revising the power of the Constitution that the president and the law making body cannot declare war without the legal voters of the Nation. The present Constitution was signed by only thirteen States, nearly all of the public homestead land has been disposed of, the seventeenth amendment changed the whole architecture of the Constitution, for what it was intended. I will be a candidate for President in the Democratic party, and will make known to the public, most of the Cabinet and policy of the administration if elected for the voters to pass judgement on before they go to the polls to vote. If not successful at the convention will run on nobody's party ticket, and advertise as far as my cash goes. The Stock Exchange had better get busy in the coming campaign if they want to get a National hearing. I wish to hear from those directly responsible for the famous, illegal administration. If the public press will publish free of charge I will donate the terms of Peace and the readers can digest it for what it is worth.

OUR HINDENBURG LINE.

FOR eight days the snow has rested undisturbed by city officials on Salem streets. State street looks like the famous Hindenburg line, after the allies got through battering it, with deep trenches and high embankments on each side and shell craters between. Other streets resemble other portions of the battlefield—sort of a no-man's land, more or less impassable for man and beast.

The city council authorized the street commissioner to clear off the snow, but refused to provide the money. The street commissioner failed to rise to the emergency, clean the streets as ordered and let the council pay the bills.

The snow monuments to official incapacity are gradually, very gradually, crumbling into a sea of slush. Crossings are well nigh impassable. Should a sudden thaw, a chinook wind or a warm rain come, every basement in the business district will be flooded.

The condition of the snow-laden streets is hampering Christmas trade, working financial loss to the merchants an inconvenience to the public. It is a disgrace to the community and a source of shame to its citizens.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

WOMAN ENDURES. I was perfectly sure that John would have come to me had I been placed in the same position that he was, notwithstanding that my cousin indicated that he would not. It gave me a little feeling of sadness because I knew that Charles' very doubt of John on this subject showed that he himself would not excuse a woman anything.

DID YOU EVER USE SLOAN'S? Keep it handy to promote prompt relief from rheumatic pains and aches. WHEN you know what Sloan's Liniment will do, as thousands of men and women the world over know, you, too, will keep it handy.

One young man in the party, who seemed braver or bolder than the rest, said: "Mrs. Gordon, we should like to know if you have any statement to make." "What do you mean?" I said. "You certainly must know that I have been out of town attending the funeral of my father and that I have been called back because some careless college boy drove his car into my husband's motor in which my husband and one of our friends were seated. It came immediately because I was very much worried for fear either my husband or Miss Moreland might have been hurt more than they would admit over the wire."

"Good girl, good girl! You're a brick!" muttered Karl Shepard in an undertone. "Take me away from them all quick dear. Are you sure that Bess hasn't been badly hurt?" I said loud enough for the reporters to hear as we entered the car.

Both John and Karl stepped in quickly and, as we drove off, John said to Karl, admiringly: "I tell you that's the kind of a wife to have!" "And I tell you, John," said Karl, and his mouth tightened, "you're not the kind of a husband she should have. As soon as I can assemble enough courage I'm going to tell her that you are either a fool or a scoundrel. As it is now, I think you are a little of both."

"Let me off here," he continued a little thickly. "I'll see you at your office. Your marital happiness under the circumstances, is a little more than I can bear." "I should think," John said, "that it would make you want to marry, for you can see now that the right kind of woman will stand by a man through thick and thin."

And then Karl turned to me as he left the car and asked: "Will she?" And I had already asked myself the same question.
