WINTERY WEATHER

The ice is on the river, the ice is on the lake; and on the shore I shiver, and feel rheumatic ache. I see the schoolboys skating upon the well known ice; for me, ah! watchful waiting must evermore suffice.

EMMA GOLDMAN AND BERKMAN SPIRITED AWAY TO RUSSIA

New York, Dec. 22.—Somewhere at sea the army transport Buford, informally christened the "anarchist ark" was steaming across the Atlantic today with 249 alien "reds" aboard.

The Buford with picked officers and crew, sailed under secret orders. There were in possession of Colonel Charles H. Hilton, representing the war department, who was to present them to the captain some time today.

Chief among the deportees were Alexander Berkman and Emma Goldman, anarchist leaders. In the last hours before the party boarded a boat at Ellis Island for transfer to the Buford they organized the first anarchist commune soviet.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 20.—The Harvard football squad left here this afternoon for Pasadena, Cal., where it will meet Oregon University.

Abe Manlin

Never, if I live a hundred years, will I forget that look on my husband's face. Fear, disgust, annoyance, anger, and charin blended into a terrible expression. For weeks I had been keeping that beautiful secret to myself, waiting to tell him at an auspicious time!

THE GAME COMMISSION.

GOVERNOR OLCOTT proposes, as a means of satisfying the sportsmen, that the commercial fish interests be divorced from the game interests and that two commissions supplant the present fish and game commission, which shall have jurisdiction over the respective departments.

The sportsmen have clamored for just such a division, but, even if achieved, it would not satisfy them. Sportsmen have got to have somebody to cuss for their ill-luck. When they fail to get a deer, or a pheasant, the commission is to blame.

The disadvantages of two commissions is apparent. It involves a double overhead expense for hatcheries and a duplication and multiplication of buildings and employees. It would have this advantage—it would relieve commercial fishing interests of the constant and never-ending bickerings of sportsmen, and the expense of contributing to game funds, and permit the establishment of a permanent policy that would stabilize the industry.

The separate game commission would still be the football of politics and the adoption of a permanent policy impossible. There is no satisfying the sportsmen. They have named several commissions already and as soon as named, started after their scalps. Those who can't dictate the policy, those who want jobs and don't get them, those who have freak theories they want worked out, those who are disgruntled over their lame bags and creels, those who want special favors and privileges, keep up a never-ending back-fire of criticism, defamation and calumny that disorganizes constructive work, discourages the members and disgusts the public.

Inside of six months after the appointment of a new commission, it would be facing the same criticism as the one. The members, even if selected by and taken from the ranks of the disgruntled sportsmen, would be as vigorously cussed by the others as the present commission, which also was named by the sportsmen.

As to satisfying the sportsmen—it can't be done. As long as the autos multiply, just so long will game destruction out-run game propagation and only drastic closure periods, which are vigorously opposed by sportsmen, will prevent utter extermination.

BERGER'S RE-ELECTION.

RE-ELECTION of Victor Berger to congress by the Germans of Milwaukee surprises no one. Berger, pro-German socialist leader, under conviction and prison sentence for disloyalty to the United States during the war, was expelled from congress after his conviction. His conviction and expulsion rallied about him all the disloyal elements of the dominating foreign-born population of Wisconsin, made him a hero of the lost cause of kaiserism in the German city of Milwaukee and his large vote was to be expected.

Another factor in the election that accounts for Berger's success is the prohibition issue. Milwaukee is the beer center of America and Berger stood unequivocally against prohibition, national and local, and his candidacy gave the opponents of prohibition a chance to register their protest against such sumptuary legislation being forced upon them without the consent of the state.

Congress will probably again refuse Berger a seat, especially if his conviction is upheld by the federal supreme court, for the country wants no disloyal law-makers, with foreign born theories and allegiance to enemies, at the national capital.

Milwaukee is not the only un-American city. Chicago "the sixth German city," recently re-elected its pro-German mayor—and such elections only intensify American resentment with the irreconcilable German element in our population—an element that retains its loyalty to the land of its birth and its disloyalty to the land of its adoption.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah M. Glone Gibson

PAYING THE FIDDLE Never, if I live a hundred years, will I forget that look on my husband's face. Fear, disgust, annoyance, anger, and charin blended into a terrible expression. For weeks I had been keeping that beautiful secret to myself, waiting to tell him at an auspicious time!

MEXICO LITTLE WORRIED OVER YANK DEMANDS

look so blooming," she said "both you and John are as pale as ghosts. Here take my vanity case Katherine, and put a little rouge on your cheeks." "I don't approve of rouge," John growled.

I held out my hand for Alice's vanity case and rouged my cheeks more plentifully than I should have done, had he not spoken thus. Alice sat down beside her brother, leaving the tonneau seat for Bess Moreland and me.

I tried to make myself understand that John did not want our baby. He felt personally aggrieved, because of my condition. I could not understand how a man who was so sweet, so kindly, so altogether fascinating as John was, when his plans were followed and brought to fruition, could be so disagreeable and utterly regardless of the opinions and even the rights of other people.

I remembered the night that John had spoken to me about children and how beautiful the thought was that so great a love as ours could be carried through generations by our children and children's children.

John, I was sure, wanted one or two children, but he wanted them, or at least thought he wanted them, when he was ready for them. He did not want even nature to disturb any plans that he might have preconceived and was ready to put into execution.

As she came down the steps to the motor, a forced smile upon her lips, I noticed that her cheeks were well rouged also. She was looking very well. But what a party! Every one of the four of us doing the thing we hated to do, playing the hypocrite just for the speech of people! (Tomorrow—Bess Moreland's View)

How quickly Resinol Soap cleared my skin. "Do you remember, Marie, how bad my skin looked a short time ago? I was so miserable about it. I never really enjoyed myself. I wouldn't have believed what an improvement Resinol Soap could make. It is wonderful how it gets right into the pores and cleanses them from little particles of dust, etc. It makes my skin feel so refreshed, too, because it has such a wholesome odor, and is so soothing. I wish everybody would try it."
