BIG SILVER SHIPMENT RECOVERED FROM WRECK

Redding, Cal., Dec. 17.—Silver valued at $1,500,000 has been transferred from a damaged express car to the "Oregonian", wrecked near here Saturday, to another car to be forwarded to Seattle, thence to the Orient.

The silver was in 1500 sacks, each containing $1000. Wrecking crews are clearing the tracks of debris. A defective rail caused several cars to leave the track a few of them toppling down the embankment. The accident occurred at Middle Creek. No one was seriously injured.

And I don't mind telling you, had I been Katherine and had thought of it, I would not have done it. Even though you are one of my old time friends and Jack is my brother, I should have let you both work out your salvation in this matter.

FOR EQUALITY BEFORE THE LAW

LOS ANGELES is the scene of one of those scandalous murder trials that periodically fill the columns of the press, gratify the morbid, lower morality and emphasize the inequality in the administration of justice between the rich and the poor.

The murder was a particularly brutal and inexcusable one, revealing a sordid story of lust and passion. A natural son of United States Senator New of Indiana, shot and killed in his automobile while joy riding a young woman he had been intimate with, giving as an excuse that she refused to marry him.

The trial attracts attention and is "sensational" only because of the prominence and wealth of the murderer's family. Had New been a poor man, justice would have long since taken its course—the crime being so atrocious and disgusting that but little space would have been given to it in the newspapers, only a "short and simple scandal of the poor."

When a rich man commits a crime, he is enabled to secure the best lawyers, manufacture a defense, postpone and prolong the case and frequently escape on technicalities, or with minimum penalty. The poor man has no such opportunity. Frequently he is unable to employ an attorney, and in record time he is paying the penalty.

We cannot equalize wealth, but we can equalize justice by providing the same defense and the same prosecution for the poor as the rich. The state should employ both the prosecuting and the defending attorneys. The poor should not be penalized for poverty any more than the rich for wealth.

Equality before the law will not become a reality until the poor man is provided the same defense as the rich, fense as the rich.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

IT COSTS New York City $25 a pound to fatten a baby—and the investment is declared a good one at the price. It has been found that the best way to combat tuberculosis in infants, is to fatten them, for the underfed, anemic half sick babe is an easy victim of the great white plague.

At the Children's Tuberculosis Preventorium at Farmingdale, N. J., some 600 children a year are treated—just a beginning in the campaign, for it is estimated that 40,000 little ones fall victim to tuberculosis every year in the metropolis. Only those babies secure treatment who have been exposed to the disease and predisposed by weakness. In most cases one or both of the parents have been victims. They go to the preventorium potential liabilities to the community and they leave it in four months, healthy, happy and fat, potential assets.

Simple treatment is provided. They are well fed, live in the open air are amused and taught games, and given a little schooling, and as a result of three years' experience, it has been found quite possible to save babies of tuberculosis mothers. The children gain an average of 11 pounds during their average stay of four months.

In any campaign for the elimination of tuberculosis, the prevention of the infection of the coming generation is an essential. Even at $25 a pound, baby fattening is an excellent investment.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho McGlone Gibson

BESS MORELAND'S VIEWS: I may have been unduly sensitive, but when we arrived at the hospital it seemed to me that everyone of the attendants was somewhat surprised to see me with my husband, his sister and Miss Moreland.

YANKS IN SIBERIA AVENGED MURDER, SLAYING BOLSHIEVIK

San Francisco, Dec. 22.—Lieut. J. Walter Reising, 39th Infantry, whose home is in Portland, Ore., is in his native land again, bringing from Siberia a tale of knightly and chivalry as one might read of days of old.

An American detachment avenged the murder of a Russian woman, "Marie," who was a sort of mother to the company. A hand-to-hand encounter with the murderers in which it was the privilege of Reising, as leader of the men, to kill the leader of the Reds, was the culminating feature of the battle.

"Marie" lived in the village of Zoolutch. She was a teacher of poor children, speaking English. A sort of godmother to the Americans, she was helping officers and doughboys whenever called upon. One officer fell in love with her.

A Cossack captain named Nemikoff loved her also. He became insanely jealous of the American. One night with 31 Russian bolshevik Cosacks, Nemikoff entered "Marie's" home and murdered her.

The Americans swore to avenge her death. Reising led a force of 30 men into the mountains after the murderers. They marched across deserts and over mountains and came upon Nemikoff's band after a week. They met at 6 o'clock in the evening.

A hand-to-hand battle followed. Bayonets were drawn on the American side. The Russians fired and drew knives. Nemikoff went off Reising, in his hand he held a long knife. With his other he fired. The bullet passed between Reising and his sergeant. Reising returned the fire and Nemikoff dropped.

As a souvenir of the fight, Reising has brought home the knife with which Nemikoff threatened him—and probably the same knife which slashed the breast of "Marie."

Only two of the Russians escaped. Twenty-nine of the Cosacks were killed.

J. C. Howarth, a rancher of Dee flat in Hood River county, aged 64, was found dead Saturday night. It is supposed he committed suicide by taking strychnine.

It is not unusual for a good sized living room nowadays to have three or four attractive lamps that are a distinct feature of the room. There will be the big lamp on the main table with a wood, metal or pottery base and a large silk or parchment shade. Then there will be a smaller lamp for the desk or small table—also a standing or tall floor lamp near the piano and possibly a "bridge" lamp or just a comfy reading lamp alongside Father's chair. If the lamps have been carefully selected with an eye to the furnishings of the room and to each other, when lighted, they will present a most harmonious and attractive ensemble, both from the room itself and from the street.
