INDUSTRY

"By industry we thrive," our fathers used to say; all day they looked alive, and put up tons of hay.

They went to work full tilt, and seldom paused to rest, and thus our fathers built the country we inhabit. "By silence we thrive," this is our watchword now; no longer do we strive to earn in sweat of brow.

HOOVER FOR PRESIDENT

Some time since the Capital Journal advocated the election of Herbert Hoover for president and time has only confirmed our views of his preeminent qualifications for the position.

Hoover was the one big administrator developed by the war, and all the world acknowledges it. He organized and administered Belgian relief, that preserved that nation intact during the German occupation.

Hoover is an international figure and a big one. He is familiar with European peoples and conditions. He is vigorous, virile and strong, with excellent judgment, of super-practical ability combined with the broad vision of an idealist.

Why chose a politician, when we can get a man? As president, Hoover would represent the public—not a party, not a faction, not a class, not office seekers nor organized graft, not special privilege—but the people, that is all of us.

Here is an opportunity for Oregon. Hoover was raised in Oregon and spent his boyhood in this state. Let Oregon take the lead for his nomination.

IMPROVING OUR NEWS SERVICE

With the object of making the Capital Journal a better newspaper, and giving its readers the best news service possible, the Capital Journal has become a member of the Associated Press.

The Associated Press needs no introduction to the public. Comprehensive in details, unrivalled in facilities, conservative in treatment, devoid of sensationalism, without bias or partisanship, it presents news of the world as it happens.

The superiority of the Associated Press over rival organizations was vividly apparent during the war. It was the first to report great events like the long distance bombardment of Paris, and it never deluded the world by a faked signing of the armistice.

The age of sensationalism in American journalism is passing. Scare head over trivialities have become the exclusive property of the yellows.

With the Associated Press leased wire and its 15,000 words a day, and steadily improving local service, and gradually increasing Willamette Valley news, there will be no call for people in this section to take papers printed elsewhere in the interest of other localities.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho McGlone Gibson

A GOOD POCKETBOOK—EMPTY. Right after dinner, of which I could only eat a few mouthfuls, John followed me upstairs to our room. Entering, he threw himself into a big chair and gave a sigh of relief.

than $100 for? It costs less than thirty to come home!" "While I do not recognize your right to ask me what I have done with that money, had I spent it all, I will say that $50 of it went for the all-too-ordinary wreath that you sent for my father's funeral."

"But—but you would have sent your father some flowers?" he stammered. "Very probably, I would have placed a few flowers near him, but that wreath was not for my father."

"John, let us be honest with each other and ourselves just for tonight at least, if never again. You know very well that $50 wreath was bought not for my father, but for the sake of impressing the people of my home town. You ordered it and forgot to pay for it."

"Well, what do you want money for? You have a charge account in every store in this town, or if you haven't you can have if you wish. You have your own car and so have no use for a taxi. Your household accounts are sent to the office and I take care of them. I can't for the life of me see why you need any money."

"I had to borrow $15 from Henrietta when I was called by father's illness and death." "Well, that thing wouldn't happen again in fifty years," was John's comment.

"Oh, I hate this bickering and explanations. All my life, John, I've had a certain amount of money given me for my expenses each month. True it was very small, but I had the pleasure of spending it as I pleased. I could perform an unexpected charity. I could buy a dish of ice cream for a friend. Why, if it had not been that I had some money left of my allowance, I do not know what I should have done since I have been your wife. I spent that, however, when I paid part of my fare home."

"Where is that allowance now?" he parried. "My father's affairs were not in as good shape as we thought and although provision was made for me in his will, I relinquished it so that mother could live as comfortably as she always has."

"That's where you and I will always differ, Katherine. A woman should not expect to live as comfortably after her husband dies. The provider—the financier—is gone. She does not need to keep up an expensive house, if your

Woman Who Murdered Brown Reported Caught

Mount Clemens, Mich., Dec. 30.—Officials here received word today that Mrs. Cecil Beatrice Vester, charged with the murder of J. Stanley Brown, had been located and would surrender to authorities within the next few hours.

Mrs. Vester, Sheriff Caldwell was informed, declared she could prove an alibi. Although she admitted being on "parties" with Brown and Lloyd Prevost, cousin of Brown's wife, she stated the last time she saw the murdered man was three weeks ago.
