

DIFFERENCES ON ARTICLE 10 HOLD UP COMPROMISE

By L. C. Martin
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, Dec. 31.—Difference over article 10 of the league of nations covenant are holding up compromise, mild reservationists say.

Although half a dozen sets of compromise reservations have been written both by democrats and republicans, not one so far has bridged the differences on this article.

The principal difference is that President Wilson and those who agree with his construction proceed upon the assumption that article 10 puts a moral obligation upon the United States to help prevent external aggression against any member nation, while the Lodge reservationists and the mild reservationists decline to accept the blanket obligation.

King Nearest Solution.
Therefore, in writing reservations or interpretations on this article democrats admit the obligation while republicans deny it.

The nearest approach to reconciling these two views has been made by Senator King, Utah, who has drafted a set of reservations which he is now submitting to senators for their comment.

King's reservations provide that whatever obligation may exist shall not become binding until congress so determines. His reservation neither admits nor denies the existence of the obligation but gives congress power to decide whether there is one and how it shall be met.

Mild reservationists refused to accept King's proposal. Senator McNary, "mild" leader, to whom King submitted it, said it would not do. The republican reservationists all insist that the reservation must make clear that the general obligation is not accepted.

Revisions Proposed.
An article 10 reservation submitted to McNary by a democratic senator provides for insertion in the Lodge reservation of the words "by the use of military or naval forces" following the declaration that the United States declines to assume obligation to guarantee and protect territorial integrity. This democratic proposal also included alteration of the word "unless" to "until" in the Lodge reservation so that it will read that the United States declines the obligation until congress has determined whether or exists.

"Genius" Plea Clears Artist Of Assault Charge

Turin, Dec. 30.—"Supermen" such as Arturo Toscanini, world famous musical director, are not like "ordinary mortals," amenable to man made laws, according to legal precedent established here today.

Toscanini was tried for assaulting a violinist during a rehearsal. In acquitting him, the judges decided that even a fine would be an injustice. The director, (who has been mentioned as a possible successor to the late Cleofonte Campanini, director of the Chicago Grand Opera company) owes his acquittal largely to testimony of Professor Pastor, noted psychologist. Toscanini usually insists on excluding outsiders during rehearsals, but he made a special concession to permit Pastor to indulge in a scientific study of his "enthusiasm." This courtesy was rewarded by the professor being the chief witness for the defense, which made a plea of irresponsibility of genius.

"The maestro is possessed of a sublime frenzy, which during his normal personality forsakes him and he is transfigured by genius," testified Pastor.

"In a paroxysm of inspiration, he falls the tragic prey to the tyranny of his art, and his faculty of distinguishing good from bad is subordinated. His inhibitory nerves are completely paralyzed."

Girl's Laugh Baffles Bold. Bal Bandit; Cops Nab Him

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 31.—When a bold, bad holdup man jabbed a gun in the side of Mary Ransom, pretty waitress in a downtown restaurant last night and ordered her to 'come across' the girl laughed at him and nonchalantly shoved the gun aside.

Diners slugged Frank Wright, the would-be bad man, and held him down until the cops chugged up.

THE POET SEES "HIGH POCKETS" BENNISON

By HOLLAND DEANE

Though Louis Bennison was great
When playing in "The Road Called Straight,"
Your eyes will pop out of their sockets
When you take in his play, "High Pockets."

Once more he plays a Western part,
Once more he brings to light an art
To which the public seems quite partial.
This time he characters a marshal.

He pulls a million mighty tricks—
That is, he pulls—say five or six.
Go see this play—if soon the better,
You'll sign yourself "A Hetswood debtor."

Fear Of Wood Alcohol In "Joy Water" To Curb Joy

San Francisco, Dec. 31.—Ardor of New Years revelers tonight will be dampened by the announcement of Justus Wardell, internal revenue collector, that saloons of all grades have been selling liquors containing wood alcohol and embalming fluids.

James Morrissey is the first man to die here from drinking poisonous liquor. Discarded bottles taken from saloons commonly contain dregs of poisons, said Wardell. The practice has been to attempt to neutralize the wood alcohol by using ammonia, he said.

Boxing May Be Major Sport In American Universities

Tait MacKenzie of Pennsylvania university and after a recommendation by Lieutenant Colonel Palmer Pierce, president of the organization, was adopted without a dissenting vote.
