DUTCH WOMEN IN REBELLION AGAINST OBEYING HUSBANDS

The Hague.—The ideals and ideas of Dutch women for centuries confined to children, kitchen and church, have undergone a change and the daughters of the land windmills and canals are making a strong fight for their rights.

Several great organizations have been formed for improvement of the conditions of women. With the revision of the Dutch constitution last year, women obtained full suffrage, and the result is that now there are women in nearly every town council.

Realizing, however, that the possession of the vote alone does not decide the lot of women, the promoters of the movement are now seeking to bring about changes in the laws and regulations which discriminate against the sex economically and socially.

"According to the Dutch law," says Mrs. Wilhelmina Brincken, one of the leaders of the women's movement, "the father has practically all the say about the education of the children. He decides as to their future, consents to their marriage and may send them wherever he likes."

"As things are now, a Dutch woman has to suffer almost anything from a tyrannical husband and nothing short of adultery or bodily ill usage can rid her of his despotism."

"One of the greatest obstacles these women leaders have to overcome is the conservatism of the old-fashioned women, who, especially in the rural districts, form a great part of the population."

But the women who are fighting for the betterment of their sex hope in the end to succeed in conquering this prejudice.
