The A. J. Rahn residence, 807 south Commercial street, was slightly damaged by fire Friday afternoon at about 4 o'clock, caused by a flying spark from the fireplace. Mrs. Rahn was absent at the time, having placed a screen in front of the fireplace before leaving. It is believed that the spark flew over the screen and settled upon a couch, setting it afire. Only the living room was damaged, and the blaze was quickly extinguished with chemicals from the fire department.

Tryouts for the inter-class debates at Willamette university were held by the freshman and sophomore classes Thursday. Sheldon Sackett and Bernardo Gopez will represent the sophomores, and Leonard Ramsay and Howard George will debate for the freshmen in the contest between the two classes next week. The work done in the tryouts was very high class for debates of this kind, and shows that the debates will be hotly contested. The juniors held their tryout Friday.

A jury in department No. 1, of circuit court, yesterday returned a verdict in favor of Philip Winters after hearing the evidence in the case. The suit was one involving alleged injuries sustained by Claire Richardson, 14, of McMinnville, following an accident in which Winters' car and young Richardson's bicycle had collided. The suit was instituted by Mrs. Lydia Richardson, the boy's mother, and damages in the sum of $10,000 were claimed. From the evidence submitted, the jury had to decide whether Richardson was driving in an irresponsible manner or whether young Richardson was riding in accordance with established traffic rules.

The affair will begin at 5 o'clock with a chicken dinner served from 5 until 7. An informal reception will follow, for which an excellent program is being arranged. Everything will be shown and explained the guests, the social gathering lasting until 10 o'clock. The entire evening will be strictly informal.

The case of C. C. Coghlan against A. Miller is being heard before a jury in Judge Kelley's court. Coghlan is suing Miller, a Woodburn resident, for $2000 for alleged malicious persecution. The case is supposed to have grown out of pro-German and anti-military sentiment and culminated in charges in which Miller is said to have employed rifles and a crowbar following Coghlan's return from France, where he served for nearly two years. Coghlan returned from France with a first lieutenant's commission, two decorations and three wound stripes. He claims that Miller, in addition to personal attacks, put false charges against him; circulated rumors that he (Coghlan) was a faker concerning his military experiences and indulged in other forms of vicious attacks. Coghlan's charges also dwell upon the German origin of several of his alleged malingers.

CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES WIN

London, Jan. 8.—Success attending the strike of several thousand men and women employees of the army and army stores, who obtained a substantial increase of wages after a three-week effort to work, is hailed by many observers here as the first signal victory of a union of "middle class" employees. There is a widespread movement in Great Britain toward the full unionization of these kinds of workers.
