Rippling Rhymes.

BY WALT MASON

GONE FOR KEEPS

Most things come back that go away; our ship comes sailing to us now, the blooming flowers come back in May, the bird to its accustomed spray, but money burned comes back no more. Oh, when old age is here, the man of sorrow walks the floor, and things of joy that cost him dear, of spend-thrift courses year by year, but money burned comes back no more. No think of chances large and fine he wasted, makes the dotard sore; had he put down his coin in brims he might possess his tree and vine, but money burned comes back no more. Old thoughts come back to break his heart, old memories of days of yore, when he forsook the ship or mast to pay in a mortgaged cart, but money burned comes back no more. And there were gay enamored maidens who helped him blow his sunny store, their forms come back, from out the shades, and march along in dim parades, but money burned comes back no more. There's nothing sadder 'neath the sky than seeing one whose head is bowed by bending troubles he made fly scuttling chances with a sigh, and money burned comes back no more. He let us from the weekly wage salt down his plunk, perchance a score; then with a green old age, if we still suffer on the stage, but money burned comes back no more.

SILVERTON CASE UP BEFORE COURT TODAY

The case of the state versus Jack Wyatt, 27, of Silverton, is being tried before a jury in department No. 1, circuit court. Wyatt is held on a $10,000 bond, concerning his relation with Viola Holmes, 16, also a resident of Silverton.

Testimony introduced during the hearing of the case Tuesday morning showed that the girl had been at a ball at various dances in and near Silverton for nearly a year. While Miss Holmes testified that she was always accompanied by her mother or by another, it was conclusively proven that Wyatt had met the girl at those dances and had accompanied her to her home several times with the knowledge and consent of her relatives.

Many Silverton people were present Tuesday, as the case has attracted wide attention due not only to the disparity in the ages of the parties but also because of testimony which Wyatt's friends declare will throw a different light upon the charges against Wyatt.

LIBERTY ENDANGERED.

As a result of war conditions in America there is danger that the fundamental spirit of individual liberty, the vital spark of democracy, will be seriously impaired in the supposed interest of public safety and with patriotic intent.

The dispatches contain many instances of the violation of rights guaranteed under the constitution—by legislatures, by officials, by police, by mobs. Peaceful meetings are raided, persons jailed on suspicion, press censorship exercised and free speech banned—under the guise of patriotism, but contrary to the American ideal of fair play.

The situation recalls that existing in the early days of the republic, in the closing years of the 18th century, when the pernicious activity of foreign agents striving to foment discord and division in the new nation, caused the passage of the alien and sedition act, with its wholesale persecution of aliens and disloyalists.

The passage of this act, however, wrecked the Federalist party, because the American people revolted, not against the punishment and deportation of alien meddlers and traitors, the punishment of crime or the suppression of violence, but at the autocratic power conferred upon federal officials and its use for the punishment and suppression of opinion.

Laws now proposed and pending as a result of hysteria against radicalism and bolshevism confer a similar autocratic authority upon officials that may result in a similar punishment and suppression of opinion—laws perhaps justified in war time, but out of tune with the ideals with which liberty has enlightened the world.

If the republic is to survive, the spirit of toleration, of fair play, of free speech, free press and free opinion, the spirit of individual liberty, must be jealously safeguarded from the attacks of over zealous patriots. If it is not, we may experience a popular reaction far more serious than that of 1800, which destroyed a political party but preserved democracy.

YAKIMA'S FINE RECORD.

YAKIMA county, Washington offers an example of what can be done in the line of production by intensive cultivation and irrigation. The county's annual crop reports shows 33,623 carloads of produce valued at $42,727,455 were shipped out of the valley.

These shipments comprised 15,309 cars of fruit, of which 9,904 were apples, a total value of $20,143,223. The peach crop brought $1,500,000, the apples $14,974,000. There were 385 carloads of vegetables, including over 100 of onions, 75 of tomatoes, 1800 of potatoes, 9,693 of hay, and 730 cars of grain. The beet sugar crop was worth $599,990, 1615 carloads of cattle rolled, with 450 cars of livestock products. Dairy products and bi-products brought $200,000 and hops added a million dollars to the wealth of the farmers.

This is a forecast of what will some day happen in the Willamette Valley. In some ways Yakima has an advantage, but in other ways, the advantage lies with this section. Marion and Polk counties are equally good for fruit of all kinds, hops, vegetables and grain, superior for berries, nuts and some other products.

Intensified, diversified production of many varieties of products spell permanent prosperity for a region so rich in agricultural and horticultural resources. In a climatic way, the Willamette Valley has all the best of it. With increased industry and population, it will also surpass in production.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE
by the noted author
Idah McGlone Gibson

A Fleeting Task

"I wish Alice that I could make all my sex understand that it isn't material things that make one happy. If that little girl walking along the street is coveting me and of you, because we are riding in this jewel box of an electric car, she is coveting a nameless something she has longed for, something that to her mind is typified—but something my dear, that neither of us has—happiness."

"I regret more than I can tell to see you in this frame of mind, Katherine," said Alice in evident distress. "Can't you throw it off in some way?"

"I'll try, but oh, how I wish that John wanted this baby. I know that last night he was very nice to me about it, but I am sure that everything he said was uttered with an effort."

Alice drove in the curb and we alighted and entered the shop. Then I found that I was very human after all. The emotion that I surged through my being, the thrills I experienced as I examined and fondled the tiny garments so cunningly wrought, are among the greatest joys I have ever known. Only a woman who has experienced the joys and sorrows of motherhood can ever know them. They are the treasure troves of her soul.

I had determined to be so extravagantly luxurious as my inclination suggested, for as John said, even though I had no money I had plenty of credit.

with this little, sweet girl

"Of course, dear," I said cordially, "for I had come to love Alice most devotedly."

"Now let's drive to the decorator's," I said. After making arrangements for the room to call upon me the next day and telling him some of my ideas about the rooms, we were going to have done over to make a place for baby we started for the golf course.

Again we were silent, and I knew that Alice and I had become real, true friends, for it is only by the silence, the silences which mean complete understanding, that one can measure the depths of friendship.

Wait a Minute!

"Here, here, wait a minute," came a voice from the curb and Alice pulled up abruptly by the side of Karl Shepard.

"My but, your girls are looking spiffy this afternoon. Take me with you. Where are you going, to the club? I'd like to be seen, entering the grounds with its two most beautiful members."

"What's the matter with you, Karl?" asked Alice. "I have never known you to be so pompous in your life!"

SLEEPY-TIME TALES
THE TALE OF CUFFY BEAR

By ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

WEDNESDAY JAN 14—CUFFY BEAR

One day Cuffy Bear and his little sister Silkie had been making sand-pies. And now, having grown tired of that, they were squatting down on the ground and had covered their legs with the clean white sand. Perhaps they would have heaped the sand all over themselves, if Silkie had not spied her father as he came stumbling up the mountain. When they noticed that he was carrying something they both sprang up and ran to see what Mr. Bear was bringing home.

Mr. Bear's mouth was stretched quite wide in what Silkie and Cuffy knew to be his most agreeable smile.

You and I might not have felt so comfortable, if we had looked past Mr. Bear's great white teeth into his big red mouth. But it was different with Cuffy and Silkie. They saw at once that their father was feeling very pleased.

"What's that?" Silkie asked. As for Cuffy, who had been noosed by the marriage halter, but once in a while one of them meets a woman who makes him feel very sorry for himself, very lonely, very sad, very depressed.

"If the woman is single, the marriage license clerk will probably have a job. If the woman is married, look out for trouble!"

"I am ashamed of you, Karl," laughed Alice. "Don't you know that you belong to all of us? You have been a bachelor so long, that every woman in our set relies upon you and likes to feel that you are remaining a bachelor because she is married. And when you know you are so perfectly harmless, no woman jeopardizes her reputation by being seen with you early and late and often, but if you are going to get into this sentimental slough I am afraid you will be lost to us for ever."

One Woman Leading

"I am afraid I shall be lost to all of you but the one woman who is leading me into this sentimental slough as you call it."

"Well, Mr. Shepard," I asked—"Oh, call him Karl," interrupted Alice.

"Well then, Karl, I am rather anxious to know if it is the license clerk or the judge of the divorce court that is going to lead you out of this slough?"

"It wouldn't be fair to the lady to answer you," he answered, "because if I did you would be reading about in your mind as to which girl or which married woman I loved, and you would probably hit upon the wrong one and make her lots of trouble."

"Quit your fooling," said Alice. "I'm not fooling—I'm in deadly earnest," said Karl Shepard with a peculiar look at me.

Dyspepsia And Home Life

What a Relief When all the Family Eat the Same Foods! Avoid Dyspepsia, Sour Risings, Gas—Indigestion from Breakfast Sausage to Dinner Mince Pie

real enjoyment when there isn't a dyspeptic frow among them. Of course a case of dyspepsia or daily indigestion must be looked after. But it is far more to the point to prevent as well as to treat, and by such a valuable means as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Coddling the stomach with soft food and predigested stuff merely invites sluggishness.

Eat your little pork sausages for breakfast without fears; have a plate of beans and a piece of pie with cheese for lunch, and end the day with a real dinner, instead of a bowl of bread and milk. Follow each meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet and get right back to your natural self.

These tablets digest food and assist the stomach to prepare the content for assimilation in the intestinal tract. Thus you get the practical relief and help which induces a better appetite and a greater freedom in the selection of foods. You will find Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets sold at any drug store in the United States and Canada, as they are considered one of the standbys by the druggist. (Adv)

STUDENT TICKETS TO BE SOLD TO OUTSIDERS

Citizens of Salem and all persons interested in the welfare of Willamette university are to be given a chance to buy the regular student body tickets, $5 per semester, entitling them to admission to all student body games and entertainments, and a subscription to the Collegian, the college weekly.

This action comes as a result of a request on the part of several Willamette business men, who have approached Coach Matthews since the admission of the local college into the conference, asking that they be given an opportunity to help financially in some way. Quite a number of the tickets have already been sold. They are on sale at Hauser Brothers.
