BRAINS NEEDED.

THE next few years will be the most important in the history of the United States and of the world.

A multiplicity of complex problems await solution as the old order crumbles into the new.

Social, economic and industrial conditions are in a state of flux, producing an era of unrest, as reconstruction remodels society.

We have outgrown the old ideas, the old standards, the old formulas. The new are in process of formation. Action and reaction mingle as we evolve progress.

To meet the world crisis successfully one element is ssential-brains. And there is no substitute.

No business, large or small, can be profitably conducted without brains. Capital and labor are helpless ducted without brains. Capital and labor are helpless without this essential—and the government of the Unitary without this essential—and the side of the mountain. But he words sink deep in our hearts, and Salem will soon be far on toward the goal of being both physically and morally the cleanest, most beautiful, heave the cleanest and days of being both physically and morally the cleanest, most beautiful, heave the cleanest and days of being both physically and morally the cleanest, most beautiful, heave the cleanest and days of being both physically and morally the cleanest and days of being both physically and morally the cleanest and the property of the cleanest and days of being both physically and morally the cleanest and days of being both physically and morally the cleanest and the property of the cl able to the people.

Yet the nation is offered as a substitute for brains, the old formula of politics, partisanship and prejudice, of platforms of expediency still unwritten as a solution for the problems of reconstruction.

The country is offered the choice of self-seeking politicians, of party hacks with narrow vision and limited horizon, of provincial training and meagre accomplish-

"MYERS' REMOVAL.

THERE will be few tears shed over the removal of Postmaster F. S. Myers of Portland, especially we can see her as she smirts, leading among the democrats. He had no qualifications that justified his appointment, and did not merit it, even on the grounds of political service. He owed it to the fact that glad. For it was a drop of rain that him think of the time he had tried he was a protege of the late Senator Harry Lane.

From his first installation in office, Mr. Myers" regime has been one of favoritism, over-officiousness, bickering, discord and espionage. For years office organization has been breaking down, efficiency decreasing, and revolt smoldering. His methods were autocratic and bad not told him that his friend Karl czar-like.
