"Notwithstanding its giant strides in twenty years, the industry has not been one in which it was easy to succeed, as evidenced by the fact that mor than 700 makers failed or retired from the business during the last six or set en years. Many new companies going into the business will find the oad difficult and success coming out to enterprising, well-financed and well managed concerns producing vehicles n a par with those now in use.

"One of the real reasons for the great growth of the industry has been the appreciation that every person wants an automobile. It is generally a question of price. The makers, therefore, worked to bring down prices and to emphasize the importance and grav thus permit of increased production which brought prices down still further.

"The automobile industry is looked upon as the leader in stanardized production. In its co-operative and constructive work it sets a worthy example to other industries.

Oral Health Must Begin at Home

Oral hygiene should originate in the home. Look after your teeth, see that you have no infection to transmit to other members of your family, and watch your children's teeth. The watchword of modern dentistry is prevention. Don't wait until you are involved in dental trouble before going to see the dentist. If you do it may cause you to loose one or more of your teeth. Your teeth were put there for a purpose so save them by co-operating with your dentist in time. Have your children's teeth examined.
