Science Church Case Is Heard by Court Today

Boston, Mass., Mar. 22.—The supreme court today heard arguments on the request of Mrs. Eunice B. Hixen of New York, for the right to intervene in the litigation to which the directors of the Christian Science church and the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Society are the principal parties.

Mrs. Hixen brought the petition as one of the first members of the church. Those first members were described by Charles F. Choate, Jr., her counsel, as a body which originally had certain authority and functions that were later transferred to the directors. It was his contention that the report of the master in the suit between directors and trustees had shown that the directors had no standing and therefore it has become necessary to have the first members come in to protect the rights of the church, a first member, appeared in opposition to the petition.

Edwin A. Krauthoff of Washington, D. C., argued that the first members were abolished by a by-law in 1901 which was approved by Mrs. Eddy and that the attempt to intervene was an attack on the by-laws of the church, the first he knew of since the church's history. The motion to intervene, he said, was in fact an attempt to have the case tried again. Mrs. Krauthoff said the master's report had not ruled that the directors had no authority. Former Governor John L. Bates, counsel for the directors, announced that they took a neutral attitude on the petition but re-
