

Ingrowing Hair Wound Not Basis For Insurance

A "wound" resulting from the removal of an ingrowing hair on the chin can not be said to be "accidental" in the sense that it would entitle the "wounded" party to collect accident insurance on the strength of such an injury, in the opinion of the Oregon supreme court.

According to Kendall's testimony the "wound" was received in the course of an altercation between the barber and a towel man. The barber denies the altercation. The case is sent back to the lower court to determine this point.

Other opinions were handed down this morning as follows:

Suffrage Seems Doomed, Report From Delaware

Philadelphia, Mar. 22.—A dispatch to the Evening Bulletin from Dover, Del., where the legislature met in special session yesterday says ratification of the suffrage amendment by Delaware seems doomed unless something unexpected develops to influence members now apparently against such action.

Failure of the Delaware legislature to ratify the suffrage amendment will probably mean that women will not vote in the coming presidential primaries and elections. Thirty-five states only have ratified, while thirty-six are necessary to make the amendment a law. No other state legislatures are expected to be in session before the presidential elections, hence upon Delaware hinges the hopes of the suffragists.

David Barrows Named President Today of O.A.C.

Berkeley, Cal., Mar. 22.—In the presence of several thousands persons including university presidents of many states and from China and university representatives from almost a hundred more colleges in countries bordering the Pacific ocean, David P. Barrows today was inaugurated as president of the University of California. The title was conferred by Governor William D. Stephens. In his address President Barrows said in part: "The university is not an open forum. Its platforms are not free to the unstructured or those without repute. It is not a place where any sort of doctrine may be expounded by any sort of persons. Once a man is called to be a professor, I should say, that he should be permitted to express himself without restraint. The earlier grades of academic advancement are necessarily probationary, but once the professional status is conferred the scholar cannot hereafter successfully be restrained."

A message of hearty support was received and read from Benjamin A. Wheeler, president emeritus, whom President Barrows succeeds and who is in the Orient. Two million and a half dollars in gifts to the university in the past year were announced at the Charter day exercises in the Greek theater today. This is in addition to an immense number of gifts of no calculable monetary value.
