SLEEPY-TIME TALES THE TALE OF MAJOR MONKEY BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

THROWING STONES Major Monkey never stopped running until he had gone so far that the voices of the picnicers reached him only faintly.

"Ouch!" he cried. "It's Red Head!" Monkey came to a halt and said: "Now we can talk without disturbing anybody."

And of course the Major's remark pleased him. It made him all the more eager, too, to see the army attack Johnnie Green and his friends.

Hidden high above the heads of the picnic party, Major Monkey gave several short whistles. "The attack!" he whispered to old Mr. Crow, who had returned with him to see the fun.

"I wonder if it's Red Head!" said Johnnie. "You remember he said he couldn't come because he had work today. But he must have sneaked over here ahead of us and climbed a tree."

Sacred Cattle Of India Win Awards

Port Worth, Texas.—The great sacred cattle of India have gone to home pastures with blue ribbons for the first time from the Fort Worth Fat Stock Show, setting a new era in the industry in the Southwest.

The Brahmas came from the great Pierce ranches in Wharton county. What attracted most interest about the "sacred cattle" is the fact that they are tick-proof and douch-resistant.

The fact that financial syndicates exploiting Mexico are helping finance General Wood's campaign for the presidency bodes no good to the southern republic which will be helpless against the union of millions and militarism.

Rippling Rhymes

I like to sing of balmy Spring, the season most inspiring; my harp I swat and keep it hot, until it needs new wiring.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

By the Noted Author IDAH McGLONE GIBSON It is a strange quick in human nature that not even the knowledge of the time of the newspaper scandal about John another long journey gave me time to think and worry.

One of the boys caught a glimpse of a queer figure above him. And with a shriek he turned and fled. His companions looked at him in wonder.

Flu Leaves the System Shattered and Torn

Help is Needed to Restore the Wasted Strength and Energy If you have been a victim of the flu, even though you were fortunate enough to escape the fatal effects that the disease so often leaves in its wake, you need not be told of the damage to the human system which this terrible disease causes.

For the human body has indeed been through a severe conflict, a siege that will tax and test the last ounce of strength and endurance. Even after complete recovery, the task of repairing the damage and restoring the lost vitality is a slow and oftentimes discouraging one, for it seems that you will just never be entirely free from the fatigue and depression that follows as an after-effect of the flu.

Your whole body seems out of gear, for the damaging effects of the flu seem to permeate the entire system, leaving you weak and sore, your nerves all unstrung, the appetite far below normal, the stomach upset, and the entire vitality at a low ebb.

The damage that has been done to your system by this disease must be repaired, and new tissue must be built to supply the waste that has taken place. Nature is a great healer, but before she can do her work thoroughly such obstacles as are in the way must be removed so that the full effect of her functions can be obtained.
