Assessor Ben West.

to serve faithfully as in the past, making every effort possible to give the same economic administration," states the candidate.

Records in the assessor's office show that business has vastly increased since Mr. West first assumed his official capacity in 1913. In 1913 there were 5000 more assessments to enter than at the earlier date, tax roll extension represents an increase of at least 40 per cent and other details of office work have increased over 100 per cent. In 1913 over 4000 real estate transfers in this county added to the volume of business.

"Only after many friends in Salem and throughout the county had repeatedly urged that I make the third did I consent to consider a third term of office. In previous years I have considered third term candidacies unfavored by the general public.

Of late years, however, there has been a general change in the attitude of voters throughout the United States. The official who has served faithfully and has proven efficient in office is regarded as just as good an investment in public as in private affairs. This has been proven many times where tested officials have been returned to office repeatedly. Mr. West said. The foregoing remarks are general and apply to men who have devoted themselves to their constituents for many years. Personally speaking, I am submitting my record to Marion county voters for their decision," he concludes.

Mr. West states that expenses of the assessor's office of Marion county compare favorably with other counties and though Marion is the second in size, its expenditures in this item are low. Clackamas county, he points out pays nearly as much for this department although much smaller and having less county transactions.
