Print Paper Probe Set For Wednesday By Sub-Committee

Washington, Apr. 22.—Congressional investigation of the print paper shortage will be started today by a subcommittee of the senate committee on manufacturers headed by Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri.

Chairman Porter of the house foreign affairs committee, accompanied by representatives of the paper industry, conferred with Secretary Colby and received assurances that the suggestion of making restrictions the subject of diplomatic correspondence would be given careful consideration.

Appointment of a commission to seek removal of Canadian embargoes on pulp wood was urged by Senator Underwood, democrat, Alabama, before the house foreign affairs committee.

Papeete Fails To Become Big Port Of Mid-Pacific

Papeete, T. H.—The prediction made when the Panama Canal was in process of construction that Papeete was to become the port of call for all traffic in the Southern Hemisphere as Honolulu is in the north, has failed of realization.

During the war there were a number of troop ships and cargo steamers going to and from European waters that put in for coal. But since the close of hostilities there have been very few of any kind of craft that have called only the San Francisco-Wellington mail steamers and an occasional cargo boat.

The Great Circle route between Panama and Australia passes far to the southward of Tahiti and to the eastward in the barrier of the Tuamotou (or Phoenix) Archipelago. Therefore, it would be necessary for a steamer to lengthen its voyage considerably in order to call at Papeete and there is no object in doing so unless the vessel is short of coal or in distress.

The local island fleet of inter-island trading schooners is being constantly enlarged and there are times when the harbor presents a very animated appearance.

Much talk was heard some months ago of projected plans for improving the harbor. But in time passed and there appear no signs of intention to carry the plans into execution, there is growing the conviction that nothing will be done in the near future.

The opinion frequently is expressed that the islands are to be sold by France to England or America although apparently no one has the slightest authority for such an opinion and that this is the reason for the failure to develop the port. The Chinese here generally believe it and many are seeking instruction in the English language.

OLD VIOLIN MADE. Durango, Colo.—F. W. Pittman of Durango has constructed a violin from wood said to be 2,000 years old. The wood was excavated from Arctic ruins near Atac, N. M., by Prof. Carl Morris of the New York State Historical society.

90 PERCENT SOUNDING BRASS. Samuel Johnson in his dictionary defined patriotism as the "last refuge of scoundrels" because of the abuse of the word by predatory politicians of the 18th century who used it as a cloak to conceal their rascality.

Candidates who have no convictions, proclaim "Americanism" as do those with the strongest kind of conviction, as their platform. Those whose appeal is to the vicious and destructive elements of discontent do so under the high sounding phrases of "Americanism." Those bidding for the hyphenated, disloyal and un-American vote, camouflage their proposals as "Americanism." Those seeking to destroy American institutions and inaugurate un-American class domination, proclaim their "Americanism." Those opposing world peace and advocating provincial isolation parade their "Americanism" as though it were a curiosity, as indeed it is. Republicans and Democrats and even Socialists enshrine themselves with the mantle of "Americanism."

Americanism is used to cover a multitude of political sins, political vagaries and political heresies. It is valuable alike to the smug stand-patter and to the red radical. Most valuable of all, perhaps, is "Americanism" to those do-nothings and know-nothings, without political ideas or ideals, who await the edict of partisanship to find an issue.

When an American, born, reared and educated in his native land, parades his "Americanism" as a platform for office, view him with suspicion, for your true American needs no label and doesn't have to advertise his loyalty. The chances are that he appeals to your patriotism to mask his political hypocrisy and insincerity, that he resorts to the shallow tricks of the demagogue to hide the short comings of a political sham and that his "100 percent Americanism" is 90 percent sounding brass and tinkling cymbal.

YOUNG TAFT FOR HOOVER.

Among the loyal supporters of Herbert Hoover is Robert Taft, son of the former president, who, according to the Terre Haute Post, started the Hoover boom in Cincinnati. His brother Charles is an officer in the Hoover club at New Haven, and reports that the ex-president is favorable to Hoover, also, because of his stand for the League of Nations.

"Having been in close association with Hoover for two years, and seeing his work, I am convinced that he is the greatest man among all the candidates and will make the greatest president," declares Robert Taft. "He meets every problem squarely, thinks out the fundamental principles which apply to it with sound ability, and takes the action required by those principles with a proper allowance for practical difficulties."

"The Belgian relief, the food administration, the general European relief, were not only well managed by him, but the very idea of the work was initiated by him. He has a knowledge of government. His training in business methods as the head of large mining enterprises enabled him to run a government department on business principles. He has proved his ability to effect the kind of reorganization in the government departments which is so vitally needed today."

"Hoover is a typical American, who started as an orphan farm boy in Iowa, worked his way through Stanford University in California, and by own ability alone, finally reached the top of his profession. His experience abroad has only made him more intensely American and more convinced that the welfare and safety of our nation, and of the world, depend on holding closely to the democratic principles on which the United States was founded."

Rippling Rhymes

I have a hundred tasks in mind, a hundred useful chores; I have the eight-day clock to wind, the cat to chase outdoors, I'm planting rhubarb, that our pies will praise in glowing terms; and soon I'll have to swat the flies, and boil uncounted germs. And so it makes me tired and sad when some one takes my time, to boost some patent liver pad that retails for a dime. Oh, when the agent comes along (you know how 'tis yourselves!) and springs his old accustomed song concerning six-foot shelves, and when I see him from his grip his large prospectus draw, the cup of sorrow then I sip—there ought to be a law. For I have many things to do; I have to fix my lyre, and patch up the defective flue that spoils the kitchen fire. I have to prime the cistern pump, and make the mower run; however briskly I may lump, I never will get done. And so it makes me tired and sick when I am asked to pause, and listen to some windy hick—there ought to be nine laws!

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

By the Noted Author IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

ALICE CHANGED HER MIND. After I had read Bob's letter my eyes filled with tears. I sincerely pity Robert, but, oh, I pitied Helen much more. With women's intuition she had sensed Robert's feelings toward his children. She knew that in the battle of humanity against natural laws poor human beings always lost.

I wonder if Alice knew that Ruth was here. As if to assure me on that matter Alice came in at this moment, saying: "I did not tell you, Katherine, that Ruth Gaylord and the children are in town. I saw them yesterday." "How is she looking?" I asked.

"Well, my dear, if I have to take on the moral support of every man who thinks he is in love with some unworthy woman, I am afraid I would have my hands full." Little Boys Grow Tall. "You won't have to do that at all, Katherine, but don't you think that you could become the moral support

SLEEPY-TIME TALES THE TALE OF RUSTY WREN BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

ALL'S WELL AGAIN. CHAPTER IX. After Rusty Wren had revived his drooping spirits by eating heartily of three dozen insects of different kinds and sizes, he felt so cheerful that he couldn't help thrilling a few songs. It was almost evening; and he was glad not to let the sun go down without thanking him in that way for shining so brightly all day.

She moved aside then, "Look!" she said.

been in the habit of taking Farmer Green's corn he would have thought twice before he ventured inside the cow barn or the carriage house. But since he never damaged the crops, and always helped them by destroying a great number of insects that ate all sorts of growing things, Rusty had nothing whatever to fear from anybody in the farmhouse—except the cat, of course.

There was really no reason for Rusty's flying through the open window, beyond the fact that he liked to prow around the great, dusty room under the eaves, to see what he could find. Once he was inside, he of one man, if that man was your husband? Call up that divine maternal instinct that is in all women. I'm quite sure that it is that instinct that makes life endurable to most women after they find the man that they have married are not Sir Galahads but just little boys grown tall.

"Again I was surprised at Alice. There is so much more to her than I have ever dreamed. She had quickly hit upon the very crux of the whole matter. Before she had spoken to me I had been wondering if I could possibly give John another chance."

Hang The Professors And Exile Teachers

Happy all Salem is not like Judge D'Arcy. Otherwise, the state capital would soon be put on wheels, which of course, would be a mistake.

Judge D'Arcy was also a speaker at the Marion county Taxpayer's league and there attacked the school millage bills, which action was repudiated by the Salem Commercial club, the Salem Salesmen's club and other Salem organizations.

There the judge also expounded his celebrated doctrine—"We do not need to educate the boys and girls; they can educate themselves if they are made of the right kind of stuff."

It is a bright idea. We have all been mistaken. We ought to hang all the professors to a sour apple tree and exile all the teachers to Siberia. College presidents ought to be backed up against a wall and shot in the cold gray dawn as public enemies. But for the presence of the teachers and professors every American child would be an Abraham Lincoln or a Peter D'Arcy—self educated in the hard school of self denial.

All members of school boards should be electrocuted as conspirators against the public safety, as disturbers of the peace and as in collusion with the forces of perdition. As to school books, they are the product of the imps of outer darkness and should be consigned to the flames.

"All the children need is a life of Judge Peter D'Arcy. A prominent illustration in the book could be a picture of the judge with one foot on the sea and the other on the land while Peter thundered in fervid oratory

Iceland Seeking Place In League
Washington, Apr. 27.—Application by Iceland for membership in the League of Nations, news of which has just reached Washington, will call attention to the little known fact that Iceland is now completely independent state. The application states that Denmark voluntarily accorded independence to the island government in December 1918.

Skin Irritations that Itch and Burn

Cause Untold Torture as Warm Weather Approaches
Many cases of eczema, tetter, pimples, scaly eruptions, and other evidences of a disordered skin very often lie dormant during the winter season, but become active as warm weather approaches, and soon break out into almost intolerable torture.

As soon as you realize that so-called skin diseases originate in the blood, and treat them accordingly, you will be on the right track to free yourself of this annoying trouble.

Just imagine that there is a steady blaze of fire in constant contact with your tender skin, and you can form some idea of the pain that must be endured by the afflicted. For the millions of tiny disease germs that seem to burrow thru the skin, each one carrying a torch of fire, cause pain that is almost unendurable.

And the constant plea of those afflicted is the oft-repeated question, "How can I find relief from this constant torture?" Not palliative, temporary relief that causes the terrible itching to abate for awhile, but real genuine relief that shakes off the shackles of the disease and restores the skin to its former healthy condition?

And temporary relief is the most that can be expected from local treatment, such as ointments, salves, lotions, etc., which is one reason why these diseases seem to hold on with such tenacity. It is not because they are incurable, but because they are improperly treated, that they appear to be so stubborn and so difficult to cure.

The fact is they are mis-named, and therefore, improperly treated. Because the trouble attacks the skin and all the pain and discomfort is confined to the surface of the skin, these
