Beats Drub Pacific in Wild Ball Exhibition

The University baseball team won a decisive defeat at the hands of the Willamette Beavers yesterday in a six-inning game. It was a wild contest, with all kinds of plays to break the record of a one-sided contest. Both teams were in the field most of the time, and ran the bases away with most anything that came their way. The help of the slow delivery of the general nervousness of the crowd and third innings were the cause of the Pacific team, with the score to keep track. H. H. Wolfe, pitcher, pitched a ball, and ran through with a double, scored both in them. Cato... hit by a pitched ball and... both of them in with a... hit. In the third... H. H. Willamette Net Game Stars Off To Eugene Today

Noble Moodie and Hugh Doney, of Eugene today playing the U. of O. faculty team, which is said to be as strong as the varsity team. The match was arranged on short notice, but the Willamette men have been training hard for the meeting with U. of O. varsity men next week and are prepared to give the Eugene pros a battle.

Abner Riddle, aged 55, a pioneer who had lived near Riddle practically all his life, died at his home there last week.

AS SEEN THRU THE JOURNAL WINDOW

What time or country on the face of the globe can furnish a peer to the bright May days of our own Oregon and the Willamette valley? What continent, or a band of the sea in the Orient can surpass the transcendent beauty of our flowered hills casting out fragrance and sweet perfume?

And poetry, eloquence and oratory, the painter's brush and the chisel of the sculptor have exhausted their powers of magic to make historic the skies of gold and crystal, the gorgeous imagery of fleecy clouds, and the ravishing beauty of lake and landscape of the western hemisphere. But pause for a moment and gaze upon the summer slopes of our own hills and mountains and contemplate the radiant beauty of the teeming valleys. The eye never tires in its admiration of the grassy meadows and the blossomed hills in the spring time. No poet's metaphor can do them justice. No orator's imagery or eloquence of speech can contrive adequate conception of them. The most ornate and eloquent diction is impotent in their presence. To be appreciated they must be seen.

All languages chant praises of the historic skies and ravishing sunsets of Italy. Nevertheless they do not excel the hues found upon the countenances of grape growers in the vicinity of South Mills. They are wholly and entirely brilliant over the outlook for the present season, and with the hills covered with flowered beauty they have every reason to rejoice. One of the critical weeks in the prime season has passed. With ten days more of favorable weather the richest crop of prunes and cherries that have been grown in the hills tributary to the Little Quaker town for several years will be assured. The month of May, the growers predict, is likely to bring the kind of weather desired for the production of prunes, and they are unanimous—about one hundred of them, cultivating approximately one thousand acres of prunes—in the opinion that the season of 1920 bids fair to be a banner year in the history of the prune industry.

There are two prune growers' associations in the Scotts Mills territory. The Butte Falls association has been organized for ten or twelve years, and the new association, known as the State association, has been organized less than a year. The last name association has just finished a big packing house and they are branching out considerably, planting numerous new orchards.

Most of the 1919 crop has been disposed of, it is said, only a few cars being held by the associations. Some of them here and some in New York. The increased price and favorable market will move these very rapidly. Only a small portion of the new crop has been sold on contract this year. It is said that sales will be slow and uncertain until about the first of June or a little later, when it will be easy to determine what the crop will be. It seems safe, at the present time, however, and the growers, universally, are highly pleased over the outlook.

Langanberries, it is claimed, were unharmed by the cold in this country and besides a beautiful crop of prunes there will be an abundance of berries.

Junior Players Put Professional Touch on Play

"Equal to any professional company," is the verdict of all who have been privileged to watch the practice of the junior play of Willamette university, "The Lady of Lyons." Loren Bader, taking the role of Claude Melnotte, is a natural lead, who would go far on the road to success were he to choose the footlights for a vocation. He has not only the physique and voice for this exacting role, but also the histrionic ability and power of personality necessary to portray such a part to an audience.

Miss Fay Peninger in the title role also takes to the part naturally, leading to it her own gracious and generous qualities. In the past Miss Peninger has played character parts, notably "Little Orphan Annie" in the Riley program last fall, but she is fully at home in the character of the aristocratic French girl who has been stripped of title and wealth by the revolution. Ralph Thomas, who will be remembered for the pleasing recital which he gave several weeks ago, is capable of taking any part, and is particularly good in the role of a French colonel.

Edwin Scolofsky has always been recognized as one of the most talented actors in the university, giving his work a spirit and fire which many professionals might envy. As the villain in the play he has a good opportunity to display his abilities. Myrtle Mason, Paul Flegel, Russell Rarey and Frank Foster are all particularly good in the parts assigned to them, and in fact the whole company is responding to the intelligent tuition of Miss Barnes, the gifted director.

Miss Barnes was at one time dramatic critic for the New York Times and will not be content with anything but the best production that can be staged. She is at present head of the Ellison-White school of drama at Portland.

As the play is to be given out over Friday night in the opera house, the chief difficulty will be in finding room for all who want to see it. Practically all of the students as well as the five hundred visitors who are coming to Willamette for May Day will want to see the play, as well as a large number of Salem people. Tick etc are now being sold by members of the junior class, and reservations
